Life Line Holds

United Press Staff Writer

London, Jan. 14. — Three British warships, including the 9,100-ton cruiser Southampton and the 23,000-ton aircraft carrier Illustrious were damaged off Sicily on January 10 in the war's greatest air-naval battle, an admiralty communique revealed tonight.

The admiralty said Italo-German forces lost 12 or more planes and one destroyer in the engagement in which the British 1,335-ton destroyer Gallant also was damaged by a mine or torpedo but safely made port.

The Southampton, one of the vessels which accompanied King George and Queen Elizabeth to America, and the Illustrious were damaged by German and Italian dive bombers. Casualties were suffered aboard both vessels, the admiralty said.

British gunfire was said to have accounted for an Italian destroyer of the 638-ton Spica class, presumably sunk with all on board.

Convoy Gets Through

The British claimed victory in the engagement, asserting that the Italo-German attack failed in its purpose, which was to destroy a large and important convoy of war materials for Greece.

"The convoy . . . was carried out according to plan," the admiralty said.

The Southampton, completed in 1936, carried 700 officers and men. The Illustrious was completed in 1939 just before the war broke out. Her complement is 1,600 officers and men.

British planes from the Illustrious were credited with the recent raid on the Italian main fleet in Taranto Harbor.

The Gallant, completed in 1933, carried 145 officers and men. Of the 16 destroyers of her class, eight have been sunk or put out of action.

The Southampton was hit but not damaged badly off the Scottish coast in 1939 by Nazi bombers raiding the Firth of Forth.

The Italian destroyer which was sunk carried a normal complement of 94 officers and men.

Since the war started Britain has lost two aircraft carriers, the Courageous and the Glorious. Both, however, were converted cruisers and were far from modern.

The four-day delay in the admiralty communique indicated that the Illustrious and Southampton as well as the Gallant have reached port for repairs.

The admiralty communique was the first official announcement that Britain is moving important convoys through the Mediterranean instead of around the Cape of Good Hope.

9-Year-Old Delores Does Her Bit in Paralysis Campaign

Underwood & Underwood.

FROM THE HEART—Delores Frances, 9, of Washington, a victim of infantile paralysis, gave Mrs. Roosevelt this pair of mittens as the First Lady broadcast an appeal last night for Nation-wide participation in the President's Birthday Celebration and its accompanying drive for funds to fight infantile paralysis

A group of national figures, headed by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, set in motion the "Fight Infantile Paralysis" campaign last night—but not without a first-class assist from a 9-year-old Washington girl who has suffered from the disease most of her life.

The heroine of the story was Delores Frances, 1230 M Street Northwest, daughter of John A. Frances, a department store window trimmer.

She was stricken with infantile paralysis when she was four months old, but, she told a Nation-wide radio audience, she is feeling much better now and hopes to be a perfectly normal person before very long.

Delores was the guest of honor at a tea given by Mrs. Roosevelt yesterday to encourage the women of America to hold bridge parties and teas to raise funds for the paralysis

U. S. Calls Up 110,000 Guardsmen

All Remaining D. C. Militiamen Included; Feb. 3 Is Tentative Date

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt yesterday ordered into Federal service more than 110,000 National Guardsmen, including all remaining members of District units.

Although announcement of his executive order did not include induction dates of the Twenty-ninth Division, which includes the District, Virginia, Maryland and part of the Pennsylvania Guard, February 3 has been set as a tentative date for this division. It was understood yesterday from authoritative War Department sources that the tentative date would be made final.

Some to Leave Early

In addition to Twenty-ninth Division troops in the District Guard, Company A, 372d Infantry, Washington's only colored unit, was included in the order. This company, which it was understood probably would be combined with the Baltimore company to make the Headquarters and Service Company of the regiment, will not have served with the regiment until induction.

In advance of the Twenty-ninth, Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, of Baltimore, commanding general, 12 staff officers, and 20 enlisted men of the division's headquarters detachment were ordered yesterday into service January 20 for two weeks' "additional field service" at Fort George G. Meade, Md. Among the staff officers were Col. John W. Oehmann, commanding the District's 121st Engineers and division engineer officer, and Lieut. Col. Peyton G. Nevitt, of Washington, division adjutant general.

Other Guard Units

Others of the division staff named in the order were Lieut. Col. Herbert L. Grymes, of Baltimore; Col. John A. Cutchins, of Richmond, chief of staff; Lieut. Col. Edwin P. Conquest, of Richmond; Lieut Col. Carey Jarman, of Baltimore; Lieut. Col. Kenneth S. Purdie, of Lexington, Va.; Maj. Philip K. Moisan, of Baltimore; Col. Ralph Hutchins, of Baltimore, commanding the 104th Quartermaster Regiment; Lieut. Col. William McKee Dunn, of Hot Springs, Va., and Washington, division signal officer; Capt. Edward L. Reynolds, of Baltimore, post exchange officer, and Capt. H. Melvin Smick, of Baltimore, aide to Gen. Reckord.

They will complete preliminary training February 2, in time to join their units or confer with other staff members before the division's induction date.

Wheeler's Charge 'Untruthful,' Roosevelt Says; British Given 90% of Combat Plane Output

Army Receives 40 Fighting Aircraft In 3 Months; Gets Needed Trainers

By John G. Norris
Copyright, 1941, by The Washington Post

Fewer than 40 combat air planes have been delivered to the Army in the last three months, The Washington Post learned last night.

In that period, 90 per cent of the fighting planes produced in the United States were shipped abroad, a rate that is still maintained, reliable sources disclosed. Most of them are going to Great Britain, it was said.

Members of the Senate Military Affairs Committee revealed the scanty deliveries of bombers and pursuit craft in the last quarter of 1940, after a long conference with Army chiefs yesterday. They said the week-by-week charts of the additions to Air Corps fighting strength presented this surprising picture.

A high placed official of the National Defense Commission confirmed their statements, and in explanation said that the American Army and Navy were getting only about one-tenth of the national production of combat planes. This is due to three reasons, it was said:

Great Britain placed large orders last winter and spring before the United States stepped up its arms program and contracted for its expansion. Deliveries on these are now coming along.

U. S. Getting Trainers

The Army gave up priority on many warplanes it was scheduled to receive to accept later deliveries of more modern craft.

Orders from "higher up"—based on the theory that Britain needed immediate deliveries worse than the United States—gave them further priorities on this fall's output.

During this period, the Army received hundreds of training planes, considered its chief immediate need. Combined with the combined with the combat craft, these made the division between the United States and Britain fairly near the 50-50 rule of thumb laid down by President Roosevelt for allocating planes to England and our defense services.

Last week, Rear Admiral John H. Towers, chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, said that the Navy received 390 planes during the last quarter of 1940—100 in October, 119 in November and 171 in December. These included a large percentage of trainers, officials indicated, though the number of fighting planes included was not given.

Bomb Voyage

Dr. Parran to Sail for England To Study Health Conditions

Mission Will Leave Saturday to Inquire Into Utilities, Transportation and Evacuation of Children in Warring Isle

An American mission to study public health, utilities, transportation and evacuation of children in bomb-torn England will sail from New York Saturday, it was learned here last night.

The mission, a high Government official said, will include Dr. Thomas Parran, United States surgeon general; Maj. Eugene W. Ridings, of the War Department general staff, and F. C. Horner, General Motors executive and transportation consultant to the Defense Commission. An expert in children's problems will be assigned by the Federal Security Agency.

The mission which will include a staff of tenchnicians, will embark on the S. S. Excalibur for Lisbon, from where they will fly to London.

Asked whether the American mission planned to help the beleaguered British, Dr. Parran replied: "I fear we don't know as much about it as they (the British) do. We will be seeking information."

Dr. Parran observed that "obviously, the war is between civilians." The United States Government, he said, is interested in knowing what happens to hospital and sanitation facilities, schools and education, transportation and other public utilities under the constant pressure of bombs and threatened invasion.

He said that the mission expected to stay in Great Britain for at least a month, "depending on our luck with the German bombers," and then attempt to get visas for similar studies in Paris, Berlin, Helsinki, and other war-exposed European cities.

William H. McReynolds, administrative assistant to the President, said last night that the mission had been created at the request of the War Department.

Disclosure of the mission came from an unexpected source. Dr. Parran was a speaker last night before the National Committee to Celebrate the President's Birthday at the Carlton Hotel. Keith Morgan, chairman, in introducing the Surgeon General, mentioned that Dr. Parran was leaving the country soon. Reporters pressed Dr. Parran for more explicit information and

'Quote Me on That'

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt yesterday denounced as "the rottenest thing that has been said in public life in my generation" a statement by Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana.

It was the President's first show of anger in the aid-to-Britain controversy. He was as aroused as reporters have ever seen him as he referred to remarks by the Senate's leading critic of his lend-lease program.

Without naming Wheeler, the President said he regarded statements "about plowing under every fourth American child" as the "most untruthful, as the most dastardly, unpatriotic thing that has ever been said. Quote me on that."

The outburst came on the eve of hearings, at 10 a. m. today on the President's bill for lend-lease aid to Britain. Secretary Hull is to be first witness before the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

In a radio debate Sunday night with Senator Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma, Wheeler said that "the lend-lease-give program is the New Deal's triple A foreign policy—plow under every fourth American boy."

Informed of the President's statement yesterday, Senator Wheeler coldly commented: "Apparently the President lost his temper."

Wheeler, who is directing the Senate isolationist attack on the blanket aid bill, said he sincerely hoped "that my statement will be proved untrue and that no American boys may be plowed under because of this Administration's warminded foreign policy."

"Nothing could be more unpatriotic than to try to fan the passions

Tokyo Premier Sees Threat In U.S. Hostility

World Disturbance May Result, He Tells Parliament

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 14.—Japan's premier, Prince Fumimaro Konoye, "emphasized the hostility of the attitude of the United States toward Japan" in a speech today to members of Parliament and business and financial leaders, Domei, Japanese news agency, reported in a broadcast from Tokyo.

The agency quoted the premier as saying that "this hostility is sufficiently characterized by America's support of England and China."

The agency said "it is understood that Konoye stressed the danger of world-wide disturbance which is threatened by the growing pressure brought to bear on Japan by the United States and also by the latter's vigorous aid to Great Britain and the Chungking (China) regime."

Domei said the premier had "a heart-to-heart talk with more than 70 members of the lower house of Parliament in the first session of a four-day conference of government leaders and Diet members."

Detailed explanations concerning the Japanese-Chinese war and the conflict in Europe were given by the war and navy ministers, Domei said, "and a frank exchange of views took place between the members of Parliament and cabinet ministers."

Mahon Heads Subcommittee On D. C. Funds

Hints He Will Fight For Cut in Federal Lump Sum Payment

By James D. Secrest
Post Staff Writer

Another Senate-House fight over the annual Federal lump-sum payment to the District was foreshadowed yesterday following the appointment of Representative Mahon (Democrat), of Texas, as chairman of the House Subcommittee on District Appropriations.

Senator Overton, chairman of the corresponding Senate subcommittee, indicated he would renew his efforts to establish a land ratio formula which would have the effect of raising the Federal payment by at least $2,000,000.

"The growing demands of the Federal Government for municipal services due to the national defense emergency, together with the further loss to the District of valuable taxable property," Overton said, "make this an appropriate time to ask for a more adequate Federal payment to the National Capital."

Mahon, who has had two years' service on the District Subcommittee, indicated he would resist all efforts to increase the United States share in the District budget and hinted that members of the House might try to reduce the sum under the $6,000,000 recommended by the

Martin Urges Labor Draft, Six-Day Week

Plane Builder Says Present Program Can Be Fulfilled Easily

Government power to draft labor as well as industry and a six-day week in all defense plants was advocated yesterday by Glenn L. Martin, Baltimore aircraft manufacturer.

Testifying before the House Naval Affairs Committee, the plane builder declared that the present Army and Navy aircraft programs could be met without great difficulty, but "we must look ahead to a bigger show."

Emergency power to draft labor in case of need should be voted now, Martin stated, as well as authority for the Government to take over idle machine tools from plants holding them for possible nondefense orders.

Pressed by committeemen for elaboration on the proposal for "drafting" labor, Martin said he was not prepared to define its form, but that it was needed to bar union organizers from "taking a bigger bite" out of what they apparently consider a "bigger and bigger melon."

"How would it work?" Representative Cole (Republican), of New York, asked. "You wouldn't suggest that we force men to work at the point of a bayonet, would you?"

Martin replied that there was no reason why labor should not be

W. Va. Senate Rivals Smile Awaiting Fate

Committee Gets Dispute Over Neely, Holt Appointees

The Senate isn't going to have 96 members again until it can figure out who had the power to appoint a Senator from West Virginia at 12:01 a. m. Monday.

Confronted for the first time in 162 years by two appointments to a single vacancy, one by the outgoing and the other by the incoming Governor, the Senate yesterday passed on the puzzle to its Committee on Privileges and Elections

The committee must recommend to the Senate whether it should seat Clarence E. Martin, of Martinsburg, former president of the American Bar Association, or Dr. Joseph Rosier, president of Fairmont State Teachers College, appointees of the "State House" and "Federal" factions of West Virginia's feud-ridden Democratic Party.

Martin and Rosier, sitting side by side on a bench in a corner of the Senate chamber, chatted amiably yesterday

Martin is the appointee of Homer A. Holt, whose term as Governor of West Virginia expired at midnight Sunday. Holt designated the appointment to take effect as soon as Matthew M. Neely's resignation from the Senate took effect.

Neely, who defeated Holt at the polls last November, succeeded him as Governor at midnight Sunday and simultaneously appointed Rosier to fill the Senate vacancy.

Kennedy to Broadcast War Views Saturday

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, Jan. 14.—Joseph P. Kennedy, retiring Ambassador to Great Britain, will make a Nationwide broadcast Saturday night to restate his views on America's duties in the European war, he told a Washington Post reporter here today.

"I am tired of having other people saying what they think I think," Kennedy said. "I am going to talk for myself."

Kennedy was among numerous persons invited today to appear before the House committee considering the President's lend-lease bill to aid Britain.

Dashed Mystery

Reporters Find Gabriel Loath To Blow His Own Horn

A surprised man was Sir Edmund Vivian Gabriel, diminutive 65-year-old Briton, when he was greeted at Washington Airport last night by a broadside of photographers' flashes and a barrage of reporters' questions.

Surprised—and mystified, too—were the reporters when they began to question him.

An anonymous tipster had informed newspapers that "Sir Vivian Gabriel, private secretary to King George of England," was arriving on the 9:25 p. m. American airliner from New York.

Newsmen were ready for him when he alighted faultlessly attired in bowler, Chesterfield, spats, gloves and all that sort of thing and faultlessly carrying a cane. The conversation went something like this:

Question. Are you Sir Vivian Gabriel?—Answer. I am.

Q. Where do you plan to stop here?—A. Well, really, old man, I haven't decided.

Q. Whom do you plan to see?—A. Well, really, nobody in particular. Some friends, perhaps.

Q. How are conditions in England?—Really, I couldn't talk about that.

Q. Are you still a member of His Majesty's secretariat?—No. I never have been, really.

Q. Are you connected with the British government?—A. No.

Q. Are you an author? Publisher? Businessman?—A. No.

Q. Are you an author? Publisher? A. You have my name, that's who I am.

Q. What do you do? What's your occupation?—A. I'm a private citizen. Here to see friends. Leaving tomorrow.

And with that the gentleman stepped into Diamond Cab No. 788 and was driven away.

The mystified newsmen obtained some enlightenment by calling the British Embassy, where it was said that Sir Edmund, a retired Indian affairs official, had been in this country for some time to analyze American press accounts of affairs in India. He is employed by the British Library of Information.

In a mile-a-minute pursuit through rush-hour traffic, District police last night captured a speeding motorist after an 8-mile chase that ended in a crash and the injury of four persons. Two occupants of the fleeing automobile, which had been stolen, escaped on foot.

Again and again the pursued car, lights out, "miraculously" missed striking other vehicles in the wild ride through uptown Washington and against red lights at heavy-traffic intersections, according to police.

But at Thirty-fourth Street and Woodley Road Northwest, the speeder, attempting to streak through another red light, smashed into a car, abruptly ending the race.

The driver of the fugitive car, police said, was flung to the street when his door flew open. He attempted to hobble off, but was seized a block away by the pursuing police, R. P. Herlong and W. W. Knox, of the Accident Prevention Unit. Two other occupants of the car were thrown through the windshield, police reported, but managed to escape on foot.

Six charges were placed against the alleged driver, identified by police as William C. Cayne, colored, of 1019 E Street Northwest, as follows: Driving without an operator's permit, joyriding, driving

Rep. Schulte Calls Leaders to Parley On Auto Fatalities

Alarmed at the record of traffic deaths since the beginning of the year, Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, acting chairman of the House District Committee, yesterday called a conference of District officials and members of a subcommittee on traffic for this morning.

At the same time it was learned that an "emergency" meeting of the Commissioners' Traffic Advisory Council has been postponed from Friday, January 17, to Friday, January 24, so as not to conflict with a "District Night" meeting of the Board of Trade.

Schulte, who has taken the lead in previous traffic investigations at the Capitol, asked Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police; Traffic Director William Van Duzer, and Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways, to appear at his office at 10:30 a. m.

He then invited members of the traffic subcommittee, who served with him last year.

Schulte also announced that he was taking the lead in a move to obtain united support in a demand that 50 additional policemen provided in the 1942 District supply bill, which now calls for 20 more.

"And I hope and pray these policemen will be assigned to traffic duty," he added.

Schulte said that today's conference was not called to forestall a more thorough investigation, but was of an emergency nature.

New York, Jan. 14 (AP).—Two young pay roll bandits—brothers—coldly shot to death a protesting victim today in an elevator of a midtown building, then raced onto crowded Fifth Avenue, terrorized throngs of noonday shoppers, killed a patrolman and sent a bullet into the throat of a taxi driver.

The chase, which led through a block-long department store at Fifth Avenue and Thirty-fourth Street, ended with one of the bandits lying in the street, wounded by the slain patrolman, and the capture of the second gupman in a nearby 10-cent store.

The bandits identified themselves as Angelo de Stefano, 23, and his brother, Joseph, 27. The latter had three guns and Angelo two.

Assistant District Attorney Jacob J. Rosenblum told this story:

Alfred Klausman, general manager of Kemp & Beatty, Inc., a linen firm, shortly after noon stepped into the elevator of his building at Thirty-fourth and Fifth, carrying with him the firm's pay roll of $642.92.

Ahead of him was one of the bandits. Behind him the other.

George Grebe, elevator operator, was ordered to "take it up" and to keep his head turned or "we'll let you have it."

Grebe said he heard the gunmen demand the money and Klausman cry, "No, no, no!" Klausman was shot through the head and back.

Traffic Patrolman Edward Maher, 52, fired as the fugitives dashed toward Fifth Avenue. Angelo dropped, with a bullet in his leg, and feigned death.

As Maher stood over him, the man whirled and fired. A bullet plowed through the chest of the patrolman.

As Angelo attempted again to escape, Leonard Weisberg, a cab driver, and William C. Mueller, a bank guard, leaped upon him.

Attempting to wrest the gun from the killer's hand, Weisberg was shot through the neck. Mueller was slightly wounded.

Roosevelt Calls Wheeler Charge 'Untruthful'

of the American people to the point where they will accept a program that will eventually send American boys to be killed upon foreign battlefields," Wheeler told reporters.

"A Poor Slogan"

The President declined to say who first made the statement about plowing under every fourth child. He said it had been said by several persons. A good time to kill a poor slogan, he added, was at its birth.

Mr. Roosevelt struck out after a reporter asked him to comment on references to the bill as a "blank check" measure.

In reply, he challenged anyone to write another bill that could not be so labeled and would accomplish the same purpose as the one now pending.

Then he went on, and his full quote was:

"That is not an answer to those, at all, who talk about plowing under every fourth American child, which I regard as the most untruthful, as the most dastardly, unpatriotic thing that has ever been said. That really is the rottenest thing that has been said in public life in my generation."

Wheeler's retort came when reporters went to him for comment. The Montanan said he was "not unmindful that the President has said that no American boys will be sent abroad.

"But I submit to the American people that every speech that has been made by the President since the election has been one tending to bring this country step by step into this foreign war. I hope his utterances will not intimidate other people from expressing their opinions."

As advocates of the measure urged speed in its passage, the House Foreign Affairs Committee plugged up seven committee vacancies and prepared to proceed today.

Senate Meeting Put Off

In the Senate, Senator Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, Senate president pro tem, announced the Senate Foreign Relations Committee meeting scheduled for today would be postponed "a few days" until Chairman George (Democrat), of Georgia, recovers from a slight attack of grip.

"Senator George asked me to go ahead and hold the committee session tomorrow, but, on my own responsibility, it will not be held," Harrison said.

A Senate Democratic Steering Committee meantime prepared to fill two majority vacancies on the Senate group. Believed certain to be offered a Foreign Relations Committee post was Senator James F. Byrnes, of South Carolina, one of the President's close consultants on the bill.

Isolationist strength on the committee is strongly intrenched. The addition of Byrnes would reinforce the Administration's forces on the committee.

In the House, Republicans picked three of their members to fill vacancies on the House Foreign Affairs Committee—Representative Mundt, of South Dakota; Representative Jonkman, of Michigan, and Representative Francis P. Bolton, of Ohio, widow of the late Chester Bolton. These were empowered to sit at today's hearings pending their appointment by the House. Earlier four Democratic committee vacancies had been filled by appointment of Representatives Gregory, of Kentucky; Wasielewski, of Wisconsin; Sikes, of Florida, and Davis, of Ohio. The four Democrats were reported generally in accord with the aid program.

Chairman Bloom engaged the commodious Ways and Means Committee room for open hearings and announced that Secretary Hull would appear as the first witness this morning, with Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau to follow. Secretary of War Stimson was invited to testify in the afternoon and tomorrow morning Secretary of Navy Knox will appear.

Fish Asks Many

Representative Fish, of New York, ranking minority member, has invited a long list of other witnesses to appear, including Wendell L. Willkie, Joseph P. Kennedy, retiring Ambassador to Britain; William Bullitt, former Ambassador to France; Charles A. Lindbergh, Alfred M. Landon, former President Hoover and New York District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey.

Gen. Robert E. Wood, chairman of the American First Committee, wired the first request for opposition time, and was told to say when he could appear.

Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas, declared in a Senate speech that he is "unalterably opposed to the bill." Capper said he opposed equally the view "that Europe is our Maginot line" and "the grandiose idea that the destiny of the United States is to police the world."

Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, one of the first to urge aid to England as a defense measure, said in a press conference that America can best avoid involvement in the war by speeding passage of the bill in time for it to help British defenses to hold.

Budget Balance Urged to Avoid Price Inflation

Brookings Report Hits Rising Wages, Asks Broader, Higher Taxes

General price inflation faces the country if national defense is financed by a spending drive to take up slack in the industrial system, the Brookings Institution warned today.

In a special report on "Fundamental Economic Issues in National Defense," Dr. Harold G. Moulton, president of the private research institution, called for broadening the base of the tax system and increasing taxes "all along the line."

The report assailed increasing wage rates as "the greatest single source of inflationary danger," and asserted that payment of time and a half for work over 40 hours a week represents an 8.5 increase in costs.

Declaring that a balanced budget was of the "utmost importance," the report said that the defense program could be financed without increasing the public debt and without imposing an unbearable tax burden. The calculations were made on the assumption that the national income would increase annually to an average of $85,000,000,000 during the next three fiscal years.

Asking higher taxes, the Brookings Institution said:

"To meet all expenses, Federal, State and local, would require about 25 per cent of the total national income. This would represent a somewhat lighter burden than the 22 per cent taken in taxes in the fiscal year 1938, when the national income was only $66,000,000,000."

Moulton asked "prudent" financial management, which he said meant holding military appropriations to clearly established essentials and cutting nonmilitary expenditures to the bone, and broadening the base of the tax system as well as increasing tax rates all along the line.

Criticizing the upward movement of wage rates, he said:

"The greatest single source of inflationary danger at the present juncture is to be found in increasing wage rates. Already there is evidence of material increases of rates of pay in certain industries and in certain areas.

"These increases have resulted in part from competitive bidding by producing establishments for certain types of labor, and in part from pressure on the part of labor organizations."

In a footnote, Moulton remarked that "some of these increases no doubt are warranted by existing inequalities in rates of pay and by considerations of health and efficiency."

On the overtime question the report said:

"The payment of time and one-half for work beyond the 40-hour basic week has been adopted as a national policy. This means 52 hours of pay for 48 hours of work—representing an 8.5 per cent increase in cost. If output per man hour is not maintained on the longer week basis, the cost is of course proportionately increased.

". . . But as soon as capacity operation is reached in any line, further wage rate increases necessitate advances in prices if profits are not to be eliminated. And once prices begin to rise, the demand for further—compensating—increases in wage rates becomes insistent."

Moulton attacked a theory of public finance, now held by some New Dealers.

Mentioning with approval "one point of view which has strong backing both Congressional and Administrative circles," a point of view which he said called for "prudent" financial management, Moulton then said:

"The other point of view—which is championed by numerous individuals—some of whom occupy important official positions—is that instead of worrying about the public debt, we should concentrate during this emergency on the greatest possible amount of spending—public and private. The main object should be to promise the quickest possible elimination of all the slack in the industrial system. It is argued that taxes on the masses of the people should not be increased because it is desirable that purchasing power for consumer goods should be expanded as much as possible in order to help take up the industrial slack.

If the latter school of thought prevails, the report said, "the risk of a general inflation of prices will undoubtedly increase."

British to Sell $500,000,000 U. S. Holdings

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

Secretary Morgenthau, go-between in the mammoth proposed deal to sell British direct investments in the United States to investment trust companies, conferred yesterday with three more trust representatives.

Meanwhile, officials indicated that the investment companies now negotiating with the British will probably take over not more than $500,000,000 in British-owned properties, not $1,000,000,000 worth, as mentioned in some quarters recently.

Moreover, it was learned from official sources that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, with its almost limitless funds, has not been approached in connection with the vast scheme and is unlikely to play a part in it, though some banking circles have expected to see in the negotiations at some point the hand of Jesse Jones, Federal loan administrator and Secretary of Commerce.

Secretary Morgenthau conferred with Arthur Bunker, executive vice president of the Lehman Corporation; R. D. McGrath, executive vice president of General American Investors Corporation, and F. W. Bellamy, president of National Bond & Share Corporation.

The three investment trust representatives submitted bids to Morgenthau, who indicated he would refer them to Sir Frederick Phillips, undersecretary of the British treasury.

The trio's visit followed by one day a conference between Morgenthau and Cyril Quinn, of New York, chairman of Tri-Continental Corporation and leader of another group of investment concerns.

Yesterday's conference led to reports that the Quinn and the Bunker groups were rivals for control of the British direct investments and would clash before terms of the transfer of properties are finally settled.

Some giant firms, familiar to many Americans, would change from British to American control under the deal now contemplated.

Properties now under discussion for the transfer of control include: Shell Union Oil Corporation, American Viscose Co., Lever Brothers, Inc.; American Thread Co., Brown, Williamson Co., Dunlop Tire & Rubber Co., American Potash & Chemical Co., Borax Consolidated and numerous insurance companies, notably the American branch of Lloyd's of London.

Commerce Department estimates, revised for recent changes, set the total of British direct holdings in this country at about $833,343,000.

This total is subdivided as follows:

Manufacturing, $366,547,000; distribution, $29,674,000; transportation, $30,285,000; public utilities, $925,000; petroleum, $92,940,000; mining, $13,146,000; finance, $277,074,000, and miscellaneous, $22,752,000.

These properties are now paying an aggregate return of about 5 per cent to 7 per cent on the money invested, officials estimated.

According to present plans, the investment trust industry would mobilize its ready cash to buy the properties, which the British want to sell to pay for munitions ordered here before the President proposed his "lend-lease" plan.

There are almost 400 investment trust companies in the country, with combined assets of about $5,000,000,000. Since they normally keep 10 percent to 15 per cent of their assets in cash, officials estiated yesterday that the trusts would have about $500,000,000 or more available for this deal if they could all be organized to undertake it.

Officials familiar with the negotiations expected the investment trusts to take over as many of the British properties as they could afford to buy, to keep part of them for their own portfolios and to sell the rest to the general public in the form of stock in the individual business enteprises.

Users Warned Of Aluminum Alloy Shortage

Defense Officials Tell Of Some 'Tight Spots' In Optimistic Survey

By the Associated Press

Builders of buses and streamlined trains and other civilian users of high-strength aluminum alloy sheets will have to reduce their consumption during the next two or three months to free the supply for military plane production, defense officials said yesterday.

The situation requiring this curb was one of several "temporary tight spots" described in a generally optimistic survey of the aluminum outlook.

Meanwhile, Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, chairman of the so-called "Monopoly Committee," made public a letter by Harry Slattery, rural electrification administrator, saying that about one-third of a $50,000,000 group of projects was being delayed to some extent by difficulties in obtaining aluminum.

Other officials gave this picture of the situation:

The total supply of aluminum in sight is in excess of civilian requirements at the 1940 level, plus known military requirements of the United States and the British. This statement is based on aircraft programs as of last October. If additional aircraft requirements should develop, they can be met by curtailment of civilian consumption.

The "tight spot" regarding high strength aluminum sheets should be relieved by expansions being carried on by the Aluminum Co. of America and the Reynolds Metals Co. Capacity of existing sheet mills is being increased, and additional mills are to come into production in March, June and September.

As to high strength aluminum tubing, it has been necessary to delay civilian orders during recent months. But by March of this year the capacity will be "well above" total requirements.

Available figures indicate a shortage in rolled wire, rods and the like, and this is being investigated.

Talmadge Ousts Rivers' Officials

Atlanta, Jan. 14 (AP).—Eugene Talmadge returned to Georgia's Governorship today and drove swiftly toward one-man domination of State affairs by invoking an obscure statute to nullify powers of holdover officials.

Within an hour after taking the inaugural oath, Talmadge cited a section of the Georgia code that permits the Governor to act "to conserve the property of the State." He announced he was sending a score of his own appointees to replace officials named by retiring Gov. E. D. Rivers.

He named new heads for the highway department, the State revenue commission, the State highway patrol, the departments of welfare, natural resources, auditing, banking and purchasing, and the industrial board.

A. F. L. Yields In Eaton Plant Defense Strike

C. I. O. Demand Met; Four Factories May Work Pending Hearings

By Alfred Friendly.
Post Staff Writer

Increasingly critical labor difficulties and threats of more to come have spurred three Federal agencies into double-quick action yesterday to prevent stoppages in the Nation's defense production.

Last night it appeared that their efforts might bear fruit in the settlement of the most serious of the pending disputes, an A. F. of L.-C. I. O. altercation at the Eaton Manufacturing Co. plants, working on defense subcontracts. Following telephone conferences between United States Conciliation Director John R. Steelman and Gov. Murray D. Van Waggoner of Michigan, A. F. of L. auto workers' union officials promised the Governor to permit rehiring of striking C. I. O.-U. A. W. members at the company's Saginaw plant.

Inasmuch as C. I. O. officers had previously promised Federal Conciliator James F. Dewey that all strikers at the other four Eaton plants would be called back to work as soon as the Saginaw members were rehired, the way appeared paved for a speedy resumption of operations.

Green Balks at "Appeasement"

Previously, however, A. F. of L. President Green, in a fiercely worded statement attacking a C. I. O. member of the Defense Commission's Labor Policy Board, declared his union would not "offer appeasement at the point of a gun." Other A. F. of L. officers said the rehiring of C. I. O. members would not be permitted until the National Labor Relations Board ruled on a case involving an A. F. of L. contract with the Eaton Company.

Working with the Labor Board and the Conciliation Service were officials of the Defense Commission, in touch with union leaders on both sides. The strike, beginning Monday in the Eaton Company's Saginaw (Mich.) plant, spread in the last two days to four other factories of the same company. It threatened to shut down defense production of the Hudson, Cadillac and Chrysler auto factories.

From other fronts the Associated Press reported the following labor developments in defense industries:

C. I. O. President Philip Murray was said by informed sources in Pittsburgh to be preparing demands on three big steel companies for higher wages, better grievance settlement machinery and the closed shop. The companies are the United States Steel Corporation, Crucible Steel Co. and Jones & Laughlin.

Martin Parley Asked

In Baltimore, E. L. Howard, of the C. I. O. United Automobile Workers Aircraft Division, said he had asked the Glenn L. Martin Aircraft Co. for a conference "to present certain grievances."

A Federal labor conciliator conferred with Chicago officials of the C. I. O. Farm Equipment Workers Union, threatening strikes in six plants of the International Harvester Co.

The S. I. O.-U. A. W. members voted to authorize their negotiating committee to call a strike "if and when necessary at the San Diego, Calif., plant of the Ryan Aeronautical Co. The rupture came after a deadlock on wage discussions, in which Richard T. Frankensteen, chief union negotiator, charged that the company was "hiding behind and raising the false cry of national defense." The company countered with an accusation that the "C. I. O. by its tactics apparently is attempting direct labor profiteering."

In Detroit C. I. O.-U. A. W. officials said their union would seek blanket wage increases for more than 160,000 workers in 68 General Motors Corporation factories. Contract negotiations are set for next month.

Dewey, ace Federal conciliator, was detailed to the Eaton strike and had predicted yesterday that there would be a settlement "within 24 hours." Although both Labor Department and Defense Commission powers are admittedly advisory, Dewey had the approval of both agencies in "insisting" that the striking C. I. O. workers go back to their benches, and that the company accept them, in the Eaton plants in Saginaw, Detroit, Battle Creek and Marshall, Mich., and Cleveland, Ohio. About 3,700 men are involved.

NLRB Hears Case

C. I. O. workers claim that a two-year contract giving the A. F. L. union a closed shop is invalid and that they are entitled to a Labor Board election.

President Green, however, denounced the strike a "deliberate attempt to sabotage the national defense program" and accused the C. I. O. of conducting "a bare-faced raid."

Oral argument on A. F. of L. contract was completed yesterday by the Labor Board, before which C. I. O. representatives contended that a new election should be held to determine which union the workers want to represent them.

The Gallup Poll

Republican and Democratic Voters Found In Substantial Agreement on Defense Program

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director of American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 14.—Mrs. Roosevelt's concern over the failure of the Republicans in Congress to applaud her husband's defense message raises the important question: How much partisan feeling exists in the Nation on the defense program? With the election campaign still fresh in their memories, are the rank and file of Republican voters willing to cooperate with the Democratic Administration on defense and foreign policy?

What attitude the Republican members in the new Congress will take remains to be seen. But insofar as the rank and file of voters in the Nation are concerned, Institute surveys find a remarkable degree of unity among Republicans and Democrats. In fact, on many important issues, the attitude of the typical Republican is undistinguishable from that of the typical Democrat.

It is a noteworthy fact that, in all of the Institute's recent surveys on defense and foreign policy, the majority of Republican voters have been on the same side of the fence as the Democratic voters, with only one exception. The exception is that Republicans are far less inclined than Democrats to favor increasing Federal control over defense industries. On all other issues, there are only differences of degree.

The latest example is a survey just completed by the Institute on the issue of aid to Britain. Through a national interviewing staff the Institute questioned a cross-section of Republicans and Democrats on the following issues:

"Which of these two things do you think is the more important for the United States to try to do—keep out of the war ourselves, or help England win, even at the risk of war?"

The vote of the rank and file of the two parties is:

	Keep Out	Help England
Willkie voters	40%	60%
Roosevelt voters ..	38	62

There is substantial agreement also on the amount of danger to the United States if the Nazis beat England.

To the question, "Do you think our country's future safety depends on England winning the war?" the party vote is:

	Yes	No	Undecided
Willkie voters ...	65%	30%	5%
Roosevelt voters .	72	22	6

Willkie voters are just as willing to make sacrifices for national defense as the followers of President Roosevelt. Virtually no partisan difference is revealed, for example, on the question of paying more taxes.

When asked whether they were willing to pay considerably more taxes now in order to meet the cost of the defense program, 59 per cent of Willkie voters indicated their willingness, as compared to 62 per cent of Roosevelt voters. Half of the Democrats (50 per cent) want to see every family, except those on relief, pay an income tax no matter how small, and a slightly higher proportion of Republicans (52 per cent) favor the same thing.

The rank and file of both parties approved the conscription of manpower when the Burke-Wadsworth bill was passed last summer, and approved the sale of overage destroyers to Britain.

When it comes to labor unions in relation to the defense program, the typical Democrat thinks almost exactly as the average Republican.

Both are against permitting labor to have the right to strike in the defense industries, the Republicans by 69 per cent, the Democrats by 57 per cent.

So important has defense production become in the minds of Republicans as well as Democrats, that a majority of Willkie voters actually approve the extreme step of confiscation if a factory refuses to accept a defense contract considered reasonable by the Defense Commission.

"If a factory refuses to make defense materials for the Government at a price considered reasonable by the Defense Commission, should the Government take over the factory?"

The party vote is:

	Yes	No	Undecided
Willkie voters ...	64%	31%	5%
Roosevelt voters .	79	15	6

However, barring extreme situations such as that set forth in the above question, the average Republican disagrees with the average Democrat on the amount of Government control that should be exercised over the defense industries. When asked whether such control should be increased or decreased, only 39 per cent of Republicans voted "increase," as compared to 62 per cent among Democrats.

Survey Is Started On Defense Bill

The Institute has started a national survey of public opinion on the Defense Bill introduced in Congress last Friday.

The results, when completed, will show not only what the country as a whole thinks of the bill, but how much partisan difference there is between Republicans and Democrats. Results will be released in this newspaper as soon as they are available.

Testimony Backing Eakin Roils McKellar

Senator Denounces Park Superintendent At Hearing

The voice of Senator Kenneth McKellar, veteran Tennessee Democrat, rose to fever pitch yesterday at a hearing on the qualifications of Supt. J. Ross Eakin of the Great Smoky Mountains National Park, who is allegedly a Republican.

Raising his arm and fairly shouting his words, the Tennesseean declared: "I'm doing what I think is a great Government service to bring about honesty in Government affairs."

Almost opposite the Senator sat Eakin, for whose job McKellar has been gunning the last few years. Eakin has been charged by McKellar with being an "unfaithful, negligent and improper servant of the people" as well as with being one of the 146,516 Tennesseeans who voted for Alfred M. Landon in 1936.

The park superintendent said he voted for President Roosevelt. But Senator McKellar had the evidence of a marked ballot, which had been offered at Monday's hearings of the Senate committee of inquiry. An election official witness, Jay Mayers, had testified that a smudged ballot had been handed Eakin, and that it turned up with an "X" for Landon.

Experts Clear Eakin

To investigate McKellar's charges of mismanagement of park funds, the committee had engaged a firm of private accountants, who have long since reported that "we have found no evidence that there has been any misappropriation of funds directly or indirectly by Mr. Eakin."

Pursuing the subject further, investigators were sent down to Tennessee, and they brought back word there had been "no irregularity."

Two character witnesses appeared for Eakin at yesterday's hearings, presided over by Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico. One was Col. David C. Chapman, president of the Great Smoky Mountains Conservation Association, and the other was Thomas W. Raoul, treasurer of the North Carolina Park Commission.

Raoul had completed his testimony when he obtained permission to read to the committee an editorial from the Asheville Citizen, entitled "Vindication in Order." He had just completed the first sentence criticizing McKellar, when the latter angrily interrupted.

"False," Roars McKellar

"That's infamously false! You're now reading an absolutely false and untrue statement," roared the Senator, adding that he had seen Eakin for the first time only recently.

Calming McKellar's ruffled feelings, Senator Hatch said in his usual mild tone of voice: "I don't think that should be placed in the record and Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, agreed. Consequently, the entire episode was stricken from the official stenographic report.

The hearing was adjourned to next week.

Baering Down on the News

By Arthur (Bugs) Baer.

Some years ago I made the quaint observation that there are no secrets in cellophane or in a democracy.

However, we seem to be overcoming that national deficit in caution. Except with our airplanes. It seems to me that everybody is waving a blueprint of the latest bomber three times around his head and yelling hooray.

It might be a good idea if the Army started a testimonial wave of silence right in its own nest. Just last week a retired colonel yelled that we haven't got a dozen planes ready to fight.

He said airplanes become obsolete faster than fresh fish. But I still claim we should build 50,000 planes on the theory that anything that will hurt a man is a weapon when you need it.

A row boat is obsolete today. But with a dark night and enough row boats George Washington could again escape with his Army from Howe's trap on Long Island.

I think the most vital line I read on the early bombing of London was the Chicago war correspondent's comment when the antiaircraft guns opened up: "It makes you feel better when your side makes as much noise as the other side."

A retired colonel never can retire completely like a turtle under a porch. He's always got one ear out for a telephone call.

But I claim that any officer of the United States Army, drawing down half-pay, should still be subject to the rules and regulations. He is still talking on our time.

Defense Chiefs Will Address Governors

Knudsen and Hillman Will Talk on Labor And Production

Defense Commission heads will call on Governors of the 48 States to meet in their own localities the health, education, housing and other social and economic problems arising from the Nation's defense efforts, it was announced yesterday by Frank Bane, director of the Defense Commission's Division of State and Local Cooperation.

Members who will assemble in the four-day sessions of the Council of State Governors, beginning January 21, will hear William S. Knudsen and Sidney Hillman, of the Office of Production Management. They will speak on January 22, discussing defense production and labor training and supply. Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security administrator, will speak on defense phases of health and welfare.

Gov. Herbert H. Lehman, who will address the council on the first day of the sessions, is expected to discuss the plan for State participation in defense production planning which he has advocated in New York. Attorney General Jackson will speak on law enforcement problems in the present emergency.

Bane said he believed that the outstanding role of the individual States in the defense program was to handle the impact of increased production, and regrouping of manpower on the regular day-to-day, "housekeeping" activities of State governments.

He mentioned health and sanitation problems arising from Army cantonments and troop concentrations, and the transportation, school and economic difficulties that might arise from expanded employment in industrial plants.

Prices Will Be Only Slightly Higher, Say Convening Retailers

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 14.—The consensus of a c[illegible] of American retailers is that the public will buy about 10 per cent more goods this year than last, that prices will be only slightly higher and that nobody wants a "runaway" market.

These views were expressed today by speakers and numerous delegates to the annual convention of the National Retail Dry Goods Association, which represents 5,700 stores.

The national defense effort was cited as the outstanding predictable business factor.

Primary attention was given to the question of price rises on consumer goods.

Advances Called Certain

One speaker asserted basic commodity prices have risen 20 per cent since the war began, that wholesale prices generally have increased 6½ per cent but that retail prices have gone up only 1½ per cent.

On this basis, it was suggested that moderate advances, at least, in retail prices were certain.

It was constantly reiterated that the Nation's storekeepers sought to keep prices as close as possible to present levels.

"If we are able to hold prices down, we can continue to operate in volume, a prime objective of the American system of business," said one commentator.

Advertising Urged

"The more you tell the more you sell" was given the stamp of approval today by Dr. Charles M. Edwards, jr., associate professor of retailing of New York University.

Describing results of a two-year survey of thousands of advertisements in their sales results, Dr. Edwards said: "We learned that an advertisement's chance for success invariably increases as the number of pertinent merchandise facts included in the advertisement increases."

Louis Schwartz, United States Public Health Service medical director, said that an outbreak of skin irritation was spreading throughout the Nation and Canada from fabrics finished with new synthetic resin finishes.

"The first cases were all traced to one particular finish which manufacturers now have withdrawn from the market for use on wearing apparel," he said. He added that allergy was the principal cause of dermatitis from "cosmetics, jewelry and wearing apparel."

Londoner Speaks

The store operators were told by a Londoner that women were the "realists" of war and that the civilians were the front line fighters.

I. M. Sieff, vice chairman of Marks & Spencer, Ltd., English chain stores, said "one of the most interesting trends in consumption has been the change in fashion and types of goods selected by women.

"Most women have realized that for themselves and their children the utility factor must play the dominant role in their choice of goods. Whether it be a siren suit for air raid precaution work or whether it be a warm wool coat for the air raid shelters, whether stout shoes and boots for their children, or whether a hold-all handbag, the first consideration must be utility.

"Fashion, therefore, except in rare cases, has played little part in determining selection of goods."

Hitler Becomes No. 1 'Bogey Man'

Evanston, Ill., Jan. 14 (INS).—Hitler has become the children's new "bogey man," Miss Edna Dean Baker, president of the National College of Education in Evanston, reported today. She said the effect war talk had on many children of primary age and younger was pronounced.

"Research in our children's school has shown they are unable to understand the distance, time and causes involved in the war," she said. "Talk of it leaves them bewildered and fearful.

"Sometimes they awake at night crying that Hitler is going to get them."

Live Cartridges Issued for Blanks

Fort Dix, N. J., Jan. 14 (AP).—Brig. Gen. Ralph K. Robertson, acting commanding general of the post and the Forty-fourth Division, disclosed today that a number of live cartridges had been discovered in supposedly blank ammunition being issued to troops for use in combat problems.

The blanks were recalled from the troops before any were fired, Robertson said.

Father Who Rescued Twins Plans to Rebuild His Home

Melvin Hancock, 28, who rescued his twin 3-year-old sons Monday from their burning home, said yesterday:

"I'm going back down there to Accokeek and build again on the same lot. That's my land and I'm going to live there."

He spoke from a bed in Providence Hospital, where he took the children, Earl and Gerald. They suffered slight burns and will be out of the hospital shortly. Burns about the father's face and hands bore testimony to his courage.

Hancock summed up his losses thus:

His home. Temporary loss of work at Indianhead, where he is a powder attendant. All the furniture and personal belongings of himself, his wife and their two children.

"I started from the bottom," he said. "What my wife and I accumulated we made together. We're young and we can start again."

The safety of his wife, Mrs. Lucille Hancock, 21, and the children more than compensates for the losses, Hancock believes.

He said he didn't like all the newspaper publicity that has followed an act "any father would do." He is grateful, however, that the newspapers let his employer know he won't be in to work for a while.

Mrs. Hancock is staying with her sister, Mrs. Vesta Holt, at 308 Sixteenth Street Southeast. Yesterday many persons began calling on her, most of them strangers, bringing aid in the form of shoes and clothing and cash.

The young wife and mother accepted the gifts thankfully.

"You never know who your friends are," she said.

She Gives Women Part in Defense

MRS. FLORENCE KERR

President Plans Program for Home Defense

Studies Proposal By Mrs. Kerr To Organize Women

President Roosevelt yesterday mapped out a program that will give every person in the land a chance, reminiscent of NRA days, to "do our part" for national defense.

He called a meeting at the White House to blueprint a program that will bring national defense to cities and farms, factories and homes from Maine to San Diego.

Under consideration now is one proposal, by Mrs. Florence Kerr, deputy WPA Administrator, which would create a Home Defense Commission in which women would play the major role.

"Civilian morale and understanding and a country solidly behind the military and naval branches of the Government," she told reporters, "is necessary for total defense to meet total aggression."

She said the suggested organization would fight subversive influences; expand by volunteer aid community health, welfare and cultural services; learn the facts about community needs; give everyone a chance to meet "citizenship responsibilities" by performing an everyday service in the community.

Those who attended the meeting with the President were Secretaries Ickes and Perkins; Mrs. Ellen Woodward, of the Social Security Board; Budget Director Harold Smith, Miss Harriet Elliott, member of the Defense Commission; Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security Administrator; John Carmody, Federal Works Administrator; W. H. McReynolds, Administrative Assistant to the President, and Mrs. Kerr.

Mrs. Roosevelt had been asked to attend the meeting, but was unable to be present.

Willkie's Plan To Visit London Wins Approval

Seeks First-Hand View of War, May Tour U. S. Later

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, Jan. 14.—Wendell L. Willkie, seeking a personal view of the war situation in England, plans to leave New York for London by clipper about the middle of next week, it was said today at his headquarters at the Hotel Commodore.

His traveling companions will be Landon K. Thorne, a director of the First National Bank of New York, and John Cowles, president of the Minneapolis Star-Journal. Russell Davenport, personal campaign adviser to Willkie and former managing editor of Fortune magazine, will not go along, as at first reported.

Meanwhile, country-wide interest in the Willkie trip and in the American tour he is expected by many to make, on his return, in the interest of aid to Britain, was manifested in a rush of messages that has continued since he announced his plans Sunday night.

Recation Favorable

Comments on his announcement and his general approval of President Roosevelt's lend-lease program to assist the British war effort have been favorable by a ratio of about 20 to 1, it was said at his headquarters.

Willkie's revelation Sunday night that he had obtained Secretary of State Hull's approval of the trip several days previously led to the conclusion that President Roosevelt knew of the trip before it was announced.

Plans for a later tour of this country were believed being made, since Willkie was quoted by the London Express last night as saying that when he has obtained the first-hand information he seeks, "I will write and speak all over my country for you."

White Approves

Among comments received by Willkie was a telegram from William Allen White, editor of the Emporia (Kans.) Gazette and former chairman of the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies. White's telegram incorporated an editorial from his newspaper on the lend-lease bill, which was as follows:

"The certain modifications which Willkie suggests may not be opposed by the President if he wishes to avoid a violent quarrel with Congress and also if he does not stand in that quarrel as a seeker of power for the sake of power.

"Mr. Willkie is not the leader of Congress, but he is the leader of 20,000,000 Republicans and both the President and the Congressional leaders must reckon with Willkie. He has taken a position to which he can summon his party.

"Mr. Willkie's trip to England will dramatize the question before Congress as nothing else can do it. He is greatly serving his country by this action. He is making it plain that the only way to keep out of the war is for us to help Great Britain win it."

'The Dictator' Bows To Tear Gas in Chile

Valparaiso, Chile, Jan. 14 (U.P.).—Tear-gas bombs were thrown today in two theaters where the Charles Chaplin film, "The Great Dictator" was being shown, forcing the audiences to flee.

Ten persons were arrested, all members of a faction which includes the Chilean Nazi party. Three were Italian citizens. Four of those arrested were taken while attempting to enter theaters with tear-gas bombs and an incendiary bomb.

Martin Urges Draft of Labor, 6-Day Week to Speed Defense treated in the same fashion as industry.

Urges Central Authority

"Labor should be given its fair wage and its social security," he said, "but it should not be permitted to take advantage of national defense."

The aircraft company head, testifying during the committee's investigation of plane output lags, recommended that defense production be placed under one directing head.

Aid to Great Britain, Martin stated, can best be obtained by naming a "strong coordinator" and giving him power "to get things done." He said he did not believe the Administration's lend-lease bill would greatly aid this end, as the "problem is to order more planes and keep up a continuous supply of materials."

Adoption of a general six-day week in defense industry, Martin declared, would add 15 percent to production. He said it could be accomplished without loss of pay or health of workers.

His own company is moving toward a six-day week, paying time-and-a-half for overtime beyond 40 hours a week. If Congress should change the Wage-Hour Law to permit longer hours without overtime, he said, he could adjust wages so the workers would receive approximately the same pay.

No Union in His Plant

Martin said his plant, which now employs 17,000 and will expand to 42,000, has no union, and that labor relations are "satisfactory."

The committee also heard J. P. Murray, head of the Stearman division of Boeing Aircraft, which has undelivered orders for 2,000 Army and Navy training planes. He told the group that the craft will be delivered by October, and that completion of 110 planes is delayed by lack of propeller hubs and a few small parts.

C. M. McCarthy, of the Vought-Sikorsky division of United Aircraft Co., testified that there is a nine-month delay on the delivery of 57 bombers for the Navy, due to a shortage of skilled labor and an overestimate of the time it would take to expand their plant three-fold.

Tugwell Heads Committee Named by Ickes

By the United Press

Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes last night brought Rexford G. Tugwell, former Undersecretary of Agriculture and New Deal "braintruster," back into the Administration as a "special adviser" on land use in Puerto Rico.

Ickes announced the appointment of a seven-man committee headed by Tugwell and including Benjamin V. Cohen, another former headline "braintruster," to study social and economic problems raised by the enforcement of a Puerto Rican law forbidding any corporation engaged in agriculture from owning more than 500 acres of land.

Tugwell's new job, which will not carry a Federal salary, is his first Federal recognition since he withdrew from inner New Deal councils after a sensational career, surpassing that of his fellow committee member, Cohen, who is known principally as a partner of Thomas Corcoran.

Helen Keller Flies Here To Help Paralysis Victims

HELEN KELLER POLLY THOMSON MRS. P. S. SMITH

Famous Author, Blind and Deaf Since Birth, Is Eager to Assist Afflicted To Share 'in the Dreams of the World'

Still devoting herself, as always, to helping the handicapped, Miss Helen Keller flew to Washington yesterday to do her part for the relief of child infantile paralysis sufferers.

The famous author, deaf and blind since infancy, was accompanied by her companion-interpreter, Miss Polly Thomson, when she stepped out of a New York plane, to be met by her Radcliffe College classmate, Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith.

"I am greatly interested in all movements to help the afflicted overcome their handicaps and take their places in the dreams of the world," Miss Keller said in her clouded, yet unhesitating, voice.

The words were repeated by Miss Thomson, yet no "translation" was really necessary, Miss Keller's speech is so well developed.

The two women converse with each other through the manual alphabet, by which they may "talk" at the rate of 85 words a minute.

Miss Keller attended the White House "Home Party" given yesterday by Mrs. Roosevelt, at which plans were discussed for holding such parties throughout the country to raise infantile paralysis relief funds, the Carlton Hotel dinner last night in honor to hte First Lady.

Mrs. Smith, prominent Washington civic leader and member of the Board of Education, has known Miss Keller ever since they entered Radcliffe College together 40 years ago. The latter's previous visit to the Capital was last November, when she came here for the Smiths' fortieth wedding anniversary.

At present Miss Keller is working on her biography of Anne Sullivan Macy, who was her teacher for 49 years until her death in 1936. Miss Keller is in her sixty-first year.

She and Miss Thomson, overnight guests of Mrs. Smith, will return to New York this morning.

Delores Helps In Paralysis Fight

During her visit to the White House she was fed cookies and milk. She was presented by Mrs. Roosevelt to Secretary Perkins, all but one of the Cabinet wives and to women leaders from 32 States who had come to the tea party to discuss with the First Lady plans for a series of fund-raising "home parties" to be held by women throughout the Nation.

She introduced herself to a member of the White House police force. In her new blue gown and with blue ribbons in her blond hair, Delores made a radio speech, pleading for the cause with all the poise of an adult.

Delores was home and in bed as the drive continued last night with a dinner in the honor of Mrs. Roosevelt at the Carlton Hotel. The speakers were Dr. Thomas Parran, the United States Surgeon General; Dr. Charles Armstrong, senior surgeon of the National Institute of Health; Dr. Max M. Peet, chairman of the education committee of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, and Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, president of the Chicago Board of Health.

Dr. Parran observed that the world is in "rather drab days" in which the United States is the only country" where it is still possible for science to hunt death rather than pursue the means of death."

Dr. Parran, likening scientific explorers to the adventurers who sought out the New World, said "the researchers may not find a way to the East, but health in the Western Hemisphere is on the way." The results of scientific inquiry, he said, "will give us a better day tomorrow."

Dr. Armstrong, Dr. Peet and Dr. Bundesen echoed Dr. Parran's confidence in ultimate victory over infantile paralysis. They recalled the many failures in the search for a cure for the disease, and the progress thus far made.

"We have by no means lost hope," said Dr. Bundesen. "Many doorways stand open and the men of science will find, through these doors, the methods of preventing this disease which strikes so much terror to the hearts of our people."

Roosevelts Toasted

Mrs. Roosevelt reached the banquet hall at 11 p. m. Keith Morgan, the toastmaster and chairman of the National President's Birthday Ball Committee, offered a toast:

"To the President of the United States and Mrs. Roosevelt."

Mrs. Roosevelt said she hoped that out of the campaign organization and the paralysis foundation would come a solution of means to eliminate the disease.

During the broadcast, Delores, to whom medical science has restored the use of arm and leg, said:

"I am glad there is a National Foundation (for Infantile Paralysis) to help crippled children. I am much better than I used to be. I swam twice a day when I was in camp and I won the Junior Red Cross certificate for swimming in deep water. I am used to wearing my brace, but the doctor says sometimes now I can do without it.

"I have four brothers and a baby sister, and I am the only one who got paralysis. I am in the fourth grade in school. I never missed any of my work because I was sick.

"When I grow up I am going to be perfectly well. I am almost well now. I would like to think that everybody who got paralysis could be as well as I am."

"That is what we would all like to think, Delores," Mrs. Roosevelt responded. "And what we will think some day." Earlier, Mrs. Roosevelt had said:

"It is so very hard, these days, to take one's mind from the thought of youngsters . . . across the seas . . . who through no fault of their own . . . are being hurt, starved, frightened and crippled by man-made disasters . . . Despite our natural and right interest in children of other lands, we are forced to face the fact that we cannot let our own children down."

On the program with Mrs. Roosevelt were Mrs. Claude E. Wickard, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, and Grace Moore, Metropolitan Opera soprano.

"America is great and rich enough to share her blessings," said Miss Moore. "But for the great battle being fought to raise help for infantile paralysis, chairity must begin at home."

Parran to Study British Measures learned of the mission.

The War Department, Dr. Parran said, had asked him to appoint an expert on health problems for the mission. He had selected himself for the task, he added, because he believed that as Surgeon General he should obtain the information first hand rather than through observers.

Last Monday Major Ridings was named military liaison officer for the National Technological Civil Protection Committee, composed of seven engineer specialists and appointed by Secretary of War Stimson.

Stimson at the time announced that the War Department would provide the new defense unit "with pertinent information of the very latest successful methods employed abroad to safeguard civilian communities against air and other attack." The civil protection committee is expected to cope with problems of air raid shelters and safeguarding of water and power supplies.

Rep. Mahon Heads D. C. Subcommittee

Budget Bureau.

The Texan said he believed the House would accept the $6,000,000 lump sum "unless another controversy with the Senate develops." Some members, he explained, are eager to cut the figure and save what they can for national defense.

Mahon's appointment came as a surprise because of his previous statements that he would like to be dropped from the subcommittee. Chairman Taylor of the full committee, moreover, had indicated he would withhold the appointment until later in the year.

Refused Job Year Ago

The sudden naming of Mahon, who refused the job a year ago, followed a published rumor that Majority Leader McCormack might help Representative Casey (Democrat), of Massachusetts, get the chairmanship. Casey was denied the assignment two years ago when he was in line for it.

Hearings on the 1942 District budget will not be held until late winter or early spring despite the filling the vacancy. More urgent national supply bills will be handled first.

Mahon, a 40-year-old lawyer, who came to Congress from Colorado City, Tex., in 1934, said that while he does not welcome the appointment he considers his two year's experience on the Subcommittee makes it his duty to accept the chairmanship.

Favors Economical Measure

While declining to comment on the Commissioners' budget estimates, he said that he believes the taxpayers of Washington will approve an economical appropriations measure.

The sharp rise in building costs, he said, make it inadvisable to start any municipal building that is not essential.

Senator Overton, on the other hand, said that Washington will need more police, more traffic signals, additional water resources, and other municipal services will have to be increased within the next year to serve the rapidly expanding population.

"All activities of the District will have to be accelerated and increased by reason of the increase of Government employes," he said, "and the growing demands of the Federal Government for free municipal services."

The District budgetary needs, and consequently its revenue, will have to be increased to meet this emergency, Overton said, indicating that this is no time for economy.

Will Ask Property Data

Senator Overton, who had just returned to the Capitol after recovering from influenza at Naval Hospital, said he would ask Tax Assessor Edward Dent at once for information on the Federal acquisitions of District property since he first introduced his land-ratio formula two years ago. He expressed the opinion that the loss in acreage had not been large but that valuable property had been taken from the tax books.

When the Overton formula was applied to the District budget early in 1939, it was estimated that it would produce a Federal payment of approximately $8,000,000. This year the amount would be larger both because of a larger budget and the increase in Federal holdings.

Freighter Adrift With Engines Dead

New York, Jan. 14 (AP).—The Coast Guard said tonight it had been informed that the Bull Line freighter, Arlyn, 3,304 tons, was adrift in rough seas, about 127 miles off Guantanamo, Cuba, with her engines dead. The liner had asked assistance.

The Coast Guard said the ship reported having cracked a cylinder head. The Arlyn had sailed from Baltimore for San Juan, Puerto Rico.

Mackay Radio reported hearing at 10:15 a. m. today an S O S message from the Dutch steamer, Buitenzorg, that she was "aground, sinking fast." No position was given.

M. J. O'Connell Quits as Head Of Va. Utility

Noland, a Director, Also To Leave Company; Both Asked to Resign

M. J. O'Connell, president and director of the Virginia Public Service Co., has submitted his resignation from both positions effective April 1, and another director, L. U. Noland, is about to resign, The Post learned last night.

Both resignations were requested by the owner of the company's common stock, Eastern Power Corporation, a subholding unit in the huge bankrupt Associated Gas & Electric System, now controlled from New York City by three trustees, appointed by the Federal Court.

The reasons for the impending resignations remained undisclosed, with other directors and members of the Virginia State Corporation Commission, apparently familiar with the circumstances, declining to discuss the matter. The trustees likewise refused to comment, except to confirm news of the forthcoming action of Noland, prominent Virginia industrialist.

O'Connell said that when his resignation became effective, he would become associated with "one of the largest industrial companies" in Virginia.

The trustees said they were informed by a member of the company's board of directors that Noland's resignation was expected at a board meeting later this month. Noland, head of large construction and hotel interests, is in Florida recovering from a serious illness.

The impending resignations constitute another development in the troubled history of the company, which is currently in need of additional capital to expand its facilities. A refinancing plan, presented to the corporation commission by the trustees, was approved recently subject to conditions which had the effect of revamping the entire proposal. The trustees have not indicated whether they would act on the commission's proposed modification.

That Noland's and O'Connell's anticipated action might have a bearing on the tug-of-war between the commission and the trustees was believed probable in view of a recent statement of Commission Chairman Lester Hooker implying that the personnel of the board of directors had been previously selected by the commission, and that it was the commission which controlled the company.

Hearings on the recent financing proposal disclosed that Hooker had written one of the trustees, Denis J. Driscoll, that the commission "got the Virginia Public Service Company under our control by having the board of directors composed in the majority of Virginians, who are serving as directors at the request of the commission."

Hooker took the leading part in refusing the refunding program of the trustees.

The resulting deadlock may have a serious effect on defense industries in Virginia, particularly in the Alexandria, Newport News and Langley Field areas, which the utility serves with electricity. Recently, Alexandria has suffered two "blackouts" which company officials said could be avoided in the future by additional plant and equipment. There have been two interruptions of service at the Alexandria torpedo plant, which is reported to have curtailed its activity on request of the company because of inability to supply sufficient power.

Besides Driscoll, the trustees of the Associated System are Willard L. Thorp, former Commerce Department official, and Stanley Clarke, New York City attorney.

Emergency Traffic Plans Delayed Week

Advisory Council Postpones Meeting, Holding Up Action

By Howard F. Wentworth

Post Staff Writer

Action on demands for "immediate consideration" of proposals to rectify the city's current traffic troubles has been delayed for at least a week, it was learned last night.

The Commissioners' Traffic Advisory Council, scheduled to meet Friday, January 17, to act upon "emergency measures" for presentation to the Commissioners, will not meet until Friday, January 24. This was decided, a spokesman said, so as not to conflict with a "District Night" meeting of the Board of Trade.

The council is powerless to act without the Commissioners' approval of its recommendations. Among proposals which the council's legislative and enforcement committee adopted by a vote of three to one was revival of the "Committee of 100"—selected citizens to report flagrant traffic infractions.

Although the majority of city officials present at special traffic conferences Monday were in favor of the plan, it will not come to the "official" attention of the Commissioners until after the full Advisory Council has been given a chance to vote.

In view of the postponed meeting, it was suggested yesterday that Whitney Leary, chairman of the council, and members of the group's executive committee take the issue directly to the District Building without awaiting action of the full council. Leary, however, was out of town and could not be reached for comment. He has sole authority to order such action.

Other proposals—such as additional policemen, tightening of permit laws, raising the age-limit for permit applicants and boosting court penalties for major offenses—must, however, await consideration by the entire council because of their legislative nature.

Commissioner J. Russell Young said yesterday the Commissioners would be glad to take immediate action on the question of reviewing the "Committee of 100," but the matter had not "officially" come to his attention. He said he had an "open mind" on the subject and awaited only recommendations of the Advisory Council.

Action Considered Urgent

"There is a definite need for improvement of our traffic system," said Young, "and the recent number of accident deaths make it urgent that something be done immediately."

He said the Commissioners planned to seek a conference with the Police Court judges and prosecutors "just as soon as the inaugural festivities are over." He praised the suggestion of Elwood Seal, former corporation counsel, for establishment of a "city prosecutor's" office tohandle traffic matters more efficiently.

Seal, speaking before the Piney Branch Citizens Association Monday night, blamed the courts for much of Washington's traffic troubles.

Commissioner Young said he was inclined to favor incorporation of Municipal and Police Courts to provide a full-time judge for the traffic branch. He indicated this program might well "tie in" with the city prosecutor plan.

Favor Proving Ground

At the same time yesterday, Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer described as a "farce" the present system of issuing drivers' permits. The city, he said, should set up more stringent qualifications for license applicants and provide a "proving ground" for testing prospective drivers.

This plan is among those pending for consideration by the Traffic Advisory Council.

Van Duzer suggested "at least 5 acres" be set aside somewhere in the city for a driver teaching and testing grounds—"something like the famous General Motors proving grounds," he added.

Instead of requiring novice drivers to merely circle a block to prove his or her ability to operate a car (as is now done), Van Duzer proposed to duplicate every known motoring hazard on the testing field.

He suggested also that motorists be required periodically to report at the Traffic Department for re-examination.

"In this manner," Van Duzer declared, "we could soon weed out persons unfit to drive a car on Washintgon streets"

The program of rigid enforcement announced by Police Superintendent Ernest W. Brown, meanwhile, went into effect yesterday. Special attention was given to speeders and reckless drivers, although no record number of arrests were reported. Crossing patrolmen were observed on numerous downtown streets warning pedestrians against jaywalking.

THE END CAME AT 24TH AND WOODLEY—Policeman A. J. Last Rites Held For Mrs. Higbee

Funeral services for Mrs. Lenah Sutcliffe Higbee, former superintendent of the United States Navy Nursing Corps, were held at 2 p. m. yesterday at Arlington National Cemetery. She was 66.

The director of the Navy Nursing Corps in the World War, Mrs. Higbee died Friday in Orlando, Fla. Born in England, she was the widow of Col. John Henley Higbee, United States Marine Corps. She became superintendent of the nursing corps in 1908 and served in that capacity 14 years, supervising 500 nurses during the World War.

She had been ill for several years.

without light, driving through three red lights, failing to stop after an accident, and reckless driving.

George Charuhas, 24, of 930 Randolph Street Northwest, driver of the automobile into which the fugitives crashed, escaped with minor injuries and was treated at Emergency Hospital. His car, which he bought a week ago, was severely damaged, according to Policeman Knox.

The stolen car was fist spotted by the Accident Prevention Unit police at Ward Circle, speeding by without lights. When the police cruiser gave chase, Knox said, the automobile dashed up Massachusetts Avenue to Westmoreland Circle. Then, after making several turns in an effort to shake off the pursuers, the fugitives roared back and despite the usual rush-hour traffic jam at Wisconsin and Massachusetts Avenues, weaved through the intersection against the lights. The chase halted a few blocks away.

Patrolman Knox said that he and his fellow policeman were fearful of shooting at the stolen car because of the heavy traffic. He described the crossing of the Wisconsin-Massachusetts Avenues intersection as a "miraile."

Meanwhile, at an inquest here, a 19-year-old truck driver was ordered held for Police Court action under the negligent homicide act in the death of Harry J. Bender, 73, of 1016 Douglas Street Northeast, felled as he crossed at Twelfth and Franklin Streets Northeast December 26. Bender died the following day at Casualty Hospital. Styles E. Woodruff, jr., of 514½ K Street Northeast, was found "negligent in operation of his vehicle" by a coroner's jury investigating the case.

At a second hearing the coroner's jury ordered the driver of a hit-run car, which struck and killed Thomas Strohecker, 19, of 502 Randolph Street Northwest, held for the grand jury "if he is apprehended."

Strohecker, a radio repairman, was fatally injured in the 1800 block Fourteenth Street Northwest December 27 by a high-powered sedan believed to have out-of-town plates. He had been married last May.

Bank Reform Bill Offered by Glass

Senator Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, yesterday introduced a bill containing "the death sentence" for bank holding companies.

Offering the bill on behalf of Government officials, the Senator said he was doing so "with reservations."

The bill provides that it will be unlawful after June 30, 1944, for any company to hold or control more than 10 per cent of the securities of any insured bank, and that a holding company cannot control the policy of an insured bank.

Supervisory authority over dividend payments by national banks could be given to the Comptroller of the Currency, while the FDIC would exercise similar authority over insured State banks.

Because of his ailment, he left school and gave up his places on organized teams, but he couldn't bring himself to renounce athletics entirely.

Raymond is survived by his parents, Robert Raymond, a chain grocery employe, and Mrs. Anna Raymond; three brothers, Francis, Robert and Michael, and six sisters, Marion, Vivian, Lorraine, Eleanor, Patricia and Kathleen.

Services will be held at 10 a. m. tomorrow at St. Dominic's Catholic Church, Sixth and F Streets Southwest, with burial in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Prof. Lloyd-James Accused Of Murdering Violinist Wife

Elsie Owen, Royal Academy of Music Teacher, Found Stabbed to Death; Husband Is Noted Expert on English

By the Associated Press

London, Jan. 14.—A wife-murder charge was made today against Prof. Arthur Lloyd-James, 56, one of the greatest living experts on the English language and its pronunciation, for the unexplained stabbing of the violin virtuoso who taught and played as Elsie Owen.

The professor, linguistic adviser of the British Broadcasting Corporation, was booked for court tomorrow.

The popular, accomplished woman was professor of violin at the Royal Academy of Music. The body was found in the back bedroom of their Hampstead home.

Mrs. Lloyd-James had been living in Hampstead with her mother, returning there some time after she and her husband moved to the country earlier in the war.

At the B. B. C., it was said Prof. Lloyd-James had not been in touch with the company for a week and that he was understood to have been ill.

The professor had considerable influence on the B. B. C. accent, regularly consulting its announcers and tutoring them on problems of enunciation.

He also taught the Royal Air Force to speak clearly on radio telephones used in the planes.

He lectured on phonetics to the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art, designed alphabets and spelling for many native languages and spent much time teaching native languages to civil servants and missionaries.

In a series of broadcasts to school children, he was reputed to have done more than any other man to influence the future of the English language.

Mrs. Lloyd-James, under her maiden name, had broadcast regularly since the early days of the British radio and only last month had spoken from Bristol, southwestern port heavily bombed by German warplanes.

The couple's son, David, is a member of the R. A. F. volunteer reserve and a former B. B. C. announcer.

Alfred H. Haag Dies Unexpectedly

Alfred H. Haag, 56, director of the bureau of research of the United States Maritime Commission, died unexpectedly last night of a heart attack at his home, 3702 Ingomar Street Northwest.

Mr. Haag was born in New York City. In 1926 he came to Washington as a member of the United States Shipping Board. At the time of his death he was teaching in the School of Foreign Service at Georgetown University, in addition to his government duties.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Katherine Haag; a son, Alfred Haag, jr., and four daughters, the Misses Margaret, Genevieve and Mary Haag, all of Washington, and Mrs. Leonard Bahlman, of Richmond, Va.

Burglar Takes Wooden Leg, Forestalls Pursuit

Houston, Tex., Jan. 14 (INS).—A burglar who awakened E. E. Jordan, 58, early today while ransacking Jordan's home made assurance doubly sure that he would not be pursued.

Before leaping from a window, he took Jordan's trousers, which might have been sufficient, but he also took his victim's wooden leg.

Italians Claim Heavy Damage To 2 Convoys

Ships With Supplies For Greece, North Africa Pounded for 5 Days

By the Associated Press

Rome, Jan. 14.—A double line of British convoys loaded with troops and supplies to replace losses in North Africa and Greece has been battered by a 5-day Axis sea and air offensive in the Mediterranean, Fascist Editor Virgino Gayda reported today.

All told, official and unofficial Italian sources say that 15 "enemy" vessels have been sunk or damaged. (The British admiralty acknowledged today that three warships convoying "important material assistance for Greece" had been damaged. It said, however, that an Italian destroyer was sunk and 12 Axis planes were shot down in the actions.)

The Fascist high command itself has placed the score at 10 British warships hit, of which a submarine and a cruiser were reported sunk. Today's war bulletin said the "enemy" submarine was sunk January 9 by Italian planes and motor torpedo boats.

Gallant "Apparently" Sunk

Previous communiques since last Friday have listed hits on a battleship of Britain's 31,000-ton Malaya class, two aircraft carriers, two cruisers, three destroyers and a "big warship."

Augmenting these reports, Gayda said the 1,335-ton British destroyer Gallant "apparently" was sunk and the newspaper Il Popolo di Roma declared a second submarine sunk, a third cruiser and two steamers hit.

Gayda said in the newspaper Il Giornale D'Italia that the Gallant probably was sunk January 10, the day the high command reported a cruiser was left sinking and two destroyers spouting flame after an attack by Italian torpedo boats on British warships in the Strait of Sicily. He said sailors' caps and wreckage bearing the destroyer's name had been recovered from the Mediterranean.

(R. A. F. headquarters in Cairo reported today that nine planes believed to have been German Junkers 87 dive-bombers were destroyed in a British air raid on Cantania, Sicily, near the strait.)

Gayda, relating that the two columns of British ships started through the Mediterranean at Gibraltar, asserted:

"One was headed for Alexandria, where large supplies urgently were requested after the big battle (of Bardia) in North Africa. The other was going to Greece, where the British command requested with equal urgency new abundant supplies of men and equipment after the enormous losses suffered on the Albanian front."

Gayda declared that "the reality of Greek defense appears to be darker every day," despite Greek reports of "invariable and striking successes."

The sinking of a small Italian steamer by a Greek submarine in the Adriatic was acknowledged in today's high command communique, which charged the submarine killed ten members of the crew when it shelled a lifeboat "against every rule of warfare."

Election of Washington Governor Is Upheld

Olympia, Wash., Jan. 14 (U.P.).—The Washington Legislature tonight upheld the election of Republican Arthur B. Langlie as Governor.

A joint session of the House and Senate, both with Democratic majorities, voted 97 to 45 against a motion to investigate Langlie's eligibility by a nine-man committee. Irregular voting practices had been charged. Langlie, who defeated former United States Senator C. C. Dill, will be inaugurated tomorrow.

Ruhr Bombing Compels Reich To Import Iron

By Thomas J. Hamilton

Copyright by New York Times

Madrid, Jan. 14.—British bombing attacks on the Ruhr have been so successful that Germany is now importing considerable quantities of iron ore from Bilbao and in addition is drawing more heavily on Swedish ore, it was learned today.

Contrary to general expectations, little or no high-grade Bilbao ore was shipped to Germany for months after the German troops reached the Spanish frontier. Difficulties in transport—it is virtually impossible by sea and the gauge of the Spanish railroads is broader than elsewhere on the continent, necessitating reloading at the frontier—were partly responsible. Moreover, the most important mines of Bilbao are British-owned or controlled.

During the Spanish civil war and up to the outbreak of the European war, however, the Germans bought large quantities of Bilbao iron ore.

"Hisma," a German company which sponsored trade between Germany and Spain during the civil war, recently has been reorganized under another name and Spanish exports to Germany are increasing. The Germans are particularly interested in lead, wolfram, and curiously enough, almonds. The latter are to provide lubricating oil for German planes.

Almond oil, although expensive, is said to possess excellent viscosity, remaining fluid, despite the cold of high altitudes.

R. A. F. Night Fighters Begin To Get Results

By the Associated Press

London, Jan. 14.—An Air Ministry statement that R. A. F. night fighters are "beginning to show results" against nocturnal raiders and the admiralty's announcement of one of the smallest week's shipping losses of the war bolstered hopes of Britons tonight of overcoming eventually the two chief menaces to their embattled island.

Last night's massive fire-bomb raid on the southwest port of Plymouth, the target of 10,000 incendiaries and "many tons" of high explosives, showed, however, that Britain has far to go in coping with the night raiders—and the Air Ministry admitted as much.

Telling of efforts to fend off night raids, the Air Ministry news service said "more and more Nazi bombers are being intercepted and those getting through are being attacked with some success."

The number of night fighter squadrons "is steadily increasing," it said, but added that progress was slow because the pilots have to be taught an entirely new technique.

It's a Difficult Job

One night fighter pilot was quoted as saying his job was "like trying to swat a wasp in a blackout room."

Germany is working on similar lines, the news service asserted, but "so far the night tactics of the R. A. F. have proved more successful than those of the enemy because none of our night fighters have been lost in action."

Up to a late hour tonight there were no reports of air activity over any part of Britain and it was believed that bad weather on the continent coupled with recent daylight raids by the R. A. F. on French airdromes was responsible. A dense mist over the Dover Straits restricted visibility.

An admiralty statement asserted that in the week ended January 5 only four British merchantmen totaling 14,687 tons were sunk. In only four other weeks of the war have the figures been less.

The sharp decline was attributed to three factors—bad weather, increasingly heavy R. A. F. raids on Nazi-held French coast naval bases and the increased number of escort vessels assigned to convoys.

Dig in Smoldering Debrics

At Plymouth, rescue squads still dug into the smoldering wreckage in search of possible victims. Several fires raged uncontrolled there for hours, but casualties were declared to have been "remarkably light."

Civilian firefighters who pounced on the fire bombs were credited with saving Plymouth from "an even greater disaster." Homes and business houses were destroyed and the women's ward of a hospital received a direct hit.

The air ministry said that the R. A. F. kept up its night assaults on the German invasion ports, flying through dirty weather to blast the submarine base at Lorient and the Dunkerque area and starting large fires at both places.

British Seize Gen. Argentino Near Tobruk

Italian Commander At Sidi Barrani Taken on Sea Shore

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Egypt, Jan. 14.—The crew of a British motorboat, directed by patrolling aircraft, has snatched the Italian Blackshirt General, Francisco Argentino, from a hiding place by "the water's edge," near Tobruk, Libya, British middle eastern headquarters announced today.

The number of Italian generals declared to have been seized in the fighting in Egypt and the British counteroffensive in Libya thus was increased to 11. A twelfth and the most picturesque of all, Gen. Annibale (Electric Whiskers) Bergonzoli, is reported still hunted through the desert and along the Mediterranean Coast.

Argentino was identified by the British as commander of Italian forces at Sidi Barrani, Egypt, the first major Fascist base to fall in the desert campaign. He commanded a Blackshirt (political militia) division, having gone into that service from the regular army.

"Search for a large party of Italian generals and senior officers, which already has proved successful, still is being carried out by Hurricane aircraft of the R. A. F.," it was announced.

"R. A. F. Hurricanes are flying low, sometimes skimming the cliffs at 50 feet, and spotting lurking Italians who are taking refuge in caves."

British Take Ethiopian Post

By International News Service

Khartoum, Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, Jan. 14.—British thrusts into Italy's East African domains of Abyssinia and Eritrea were reported in Khartoum tonight, in news of a British victory in a dramatic night battle with Italian troops.

Savage hand-to-hand fighting marked the encounter, which was precipitated by a large-scale British frontier raid, supported with heavy artillery fire, against fortified Italian positions in the Gallabat sector bordering wild Northwest Abyssinia.

Motorized British troops and foot soldiers, taking advantage of a brilliant African moonlight, charged behind an artillery barrage to storm and capture the Italian entrenchments. They hurled hand grenades and then the infantry closed in with bayonets.

Fierce combat raged at close quarters before the Italian resistance was broken and the Fascist units were flung into broken retreat, leaving at least 60 dead on the field. British casualties were described as "very slight" and the British troops were declared to have carried all objectives.

At the same time, British army patrols some 200 miles farther north lashed at Italian positions in the Kassala sector, which guards the route leading from the Sudan into the Italian East African maritime colony of Eritrea on the Red Sea. The British were stated to be "continuing their strong pressure."

Persons close to British East African headquarters in Khartoum—the city made famous by the conquest of Lord Kitchener—predicted constantly growing British offensive action that may develop into full-scale invasions of Abyssinia and Eritrea, concurrent with the British push into Libya far to the north.

The anticipated drive into Abyssinia was expected to be aided by Ethiopian uprisings against Fascist rule, especially in the country around Gallabat, where native chieftains of guerrilla warriors have been reported increasing their attacks on Italians.

These contingents are being directed through the native "underground telegraph" system by Emperor Haile Selassie, who has established headquarters in Khartoum and expects shortly to lead an Abyssinian army against Italian forces.

Successor Sought To Col. Oehmann Who'll Join Army

The Commissioners today will begin consideration of a successor to Building Inspector John W. Oehmann, who yesterday received War Department orders to report Monday at Fort Meade for duty.

Col. Oehmann was given a two-year leave of absence by the Commissioners and his successor will serve on a temporary basis.

Prominently mentioned for the inspection post is Robert H. Davis, engineer computer in the building inspection division. Also believed under consideration are M. A. Coe, S. B. Walsh and H. H. March, of the Municipal Architect's office.

Planes Duel, Greeks Press Toward Berati

R. A. F. and Italian Bombers Exchange Counter-Blows

By the Associated Press

Athens, Jan. 14.—Greek infantrymen were reported driving toward Berati, in south central Albania, today while communiques told of a trading of blows by the Royal Air Force and Italian bombers on targets in Albania and Greece.

Although conceding sturdy Italian resistance at some points, Greek spokesmen asserted the fighting north of Kliura, whose fall opened the way for an advance on Berati, "continued to develop satisfactorily."

Berati, south of Tirana and northeast of Valona, the only major port in southern Albania still in Italian hands, was reported under British air bombardment. An R. A. F. communique told of bomb attacks yesterday on communications and military objectives there. Rising columns of smoke after the attack led to belief, it was said, that direct hits were scored.

An Italian air raid on Preveza, Greek west coast naval base, resulted in a small number of casualties and destruction of several buildings including a cathedral and a girls' school, the Greeks announced.

In Athens, elation over the removal of two Italian commanders in Albania was demonstrated in a newspaper cartoon portraying an Evzone fighter in a ring crying, "bring on another one," after he had left the two replaced generals, Ubaldo Soddu and Sebastiano Prasca, on the ropes.

The day's fighting was thus summed up by a Greek government spokesman:

"The Italians undertook an offensive on a very restricted scale by launching two local counterattacks. The first was easily repelled and the enemy force retired quickly after abandoning a number of wounded and dead.

"The second counterattack turned out worse. The Italians suffered heavier losses than during the first. They gave up this operation and returned to their position in disorder, having left wounded, dead and a group of prisoners, including two officers. Four tanks were captured. Three of them were immediately turned against the enemy.

"One enemy aircraft was shot down by machine-gun fire."

Capitol Shivers, Snow Expected As Cold Grips East

A chilling wind that swept into Washington from the north, along with a cold wave that covered almost the entire Eastern Seaboard, brought subfreezing temperatures to the District yesterday and is expected to bring intermittent light snow or freezing rain here today.

Although the District's temperature went as low as 22 degrees at 7:15 a. m. yesterday, it didn't drop low enough to please local skaters. The reflecting pool was reported by Park Police to be covered with only 1½ inches of ice, far too thin for safe skating.

The long-range forecast for the Middle Atlantic States showed today's brand of weather lasting until Thursday night or Friday. Temperatures are expected to be below normal today, rising Thursday and sinking again Friday and Friday night.

Japan's Army and Civil Chiefs Hold Separate Conferences

By H. O. Thompson

United Press Staff Writer

Tokyo (Wednesday), Jan. 15.—War Minister Hideki Tojo is meeting this afternoon with 13 senior military leaders in an effort to obtain their "full support for the army's determination to break through the difficult international situation which confronts the empire," the well-informed newspaper Nichi Nichi said today.

The newspaper said the conference is "unprecedented" in the history of the imperial army, which always has maintained its right to play a decisive role in national policy in times of emergency.

The meeting is of the "utmost significance," the newspaper said, describing the army's moves as parallel to the round-table discussions being held by Premier Prince Konoye and members of his government with parliamentarians and representatives of business, finance and the press, to enlist their support for the cabinet's policies.

There was no intimation that Gen. Tojo is not entirely in accord with the government's program, but it was considered significant that the war minister felt it necessary to hold separate conferences with the leaders of the army.

Gen. Tojo will explain the seriousness" of the domestic and foreign situations which confront the empire, Nichi Nichi said, indicating that important "final decisions" with regard to broad general policies are to be made before the diet reconvenes, January 21.

Prince Konoye's round-table discussions, which started yesterday, will be continued through Friday.

French Women Lay Shortages To Nazis, Not British Blockade

This is the third of a series of uncensored articles on Nazi-conquered France, by the distinguished Belgian journalist.

By Betty Barzin

World Copyright, 1941, by International News Service

New York, Jan. 14.—In peacetime, the French markets are the jolliest spots and are filled with an abundance of food.

In these days, French markets are forlorn-looking places. The greater majority of peasants and stall-keepers have locked their stands.

"Closed because the owner is a prisoner of war;" "closed because of shortage of merchandise;" "closed until better days come," and many other similar posters are to be found on most of the locked stands.

Others, more fortunate, open three or four days a week.

They are mostly run by women. It is amazing to find slender girls handling large quantities of butcher's meat, chopping thick bones and deftly dissecting sirloins of beef and legs of mutton into three-ounce portions, for three ounces of meat (inclusive of bacon, ham, sausages, etc.) is what the French citizen is allowed four times a week. Grocery stalls carry the now familiar notices:

No butter, no margerine, no salad oil, no sugar, no chocolate, no soap, no sardines, no cheese, no coffee, no eggs.

Recipes Exchanged

Fish stalls are generally well provided. But the available fish is expensive and not very nourishing. There was an enormous amount of fruit and vegetables in the south of France last summer and autumn, but potatoes could not be found anywhere, and a wholesale potato merchant in Marseille displayed on his empty counter a large poster which stated:

"Potatoes are a thing of the past, but they may be a thing of the future."

There are endless conversations among would-be customers, recipes are exchanged, happier days are remembered, and in the end, with a sigh, more turnips and more carrots and more spinach and yet another cabbage will be bought. But there is no butter with which to flavor them and no salad oil with which to dress them.

On lucky days, there is a sudden turmoil: a few pounds of something or other put in a miraculous appearance on one or the other forlorn stand. A queue is formed, there are exciting whispers, and a minority will triumphantly carry home maybe a creamcheese deprived of its cream, or a few ounces of tasteless biscuits, or some cereal or other at which one would not have looked in normal times, or a minute tin of potted meat for which no rationing card is required.

It will be to the everlasting credit of the women of France that there is no real bitterness in the country, that meals are served in French households as usual, and that there is no complaint against the British blockade.

The shortage is entirely due to German greed, they will explain: "You see, we always lived lavishly on what is grown and reared on French soil. We could have done without coffee and chocolate, if necessary. It is our butter, our meat, our potatoes, our flour, which we miss so badly. And it is not the fault of the English if these vital commodities are taken away from us."

And when the question of food supplies from the United States arises, old peasant women, with their unfailing common sense, say: "They must be careful. Anything which comes our way may not stay here. It will go north, to the 'gentlemen' up there. Out of every pound America will send, the Germans will get 14 ounces, and we will get about 2—unless the Americans take charge of the food when it reaches France. If the Germans get it that would only prolong the war—and our slavery."

The young ones smile, their eyes full of fun, and they state proudly: "French girls are much prettier when they are slim, and slim they shall be!"

Admiration Their Due

Young mothers sigh occasionally, for the sake of their children. I met two of them at a chemist's one day. They had hoped to find some baby's food with chocolate flavor. "No more chocolate," the lady-chemist—whose husband is doing manual work in a prisoners' camp in northern Germany—said.

"How is that? You had some a week ago."

"Well, you see, the London radio said something about the British contraband control stopping supplies of cocoa destined to France."

"So much the better!" both customers chimed.

I could not help looking at them with admiration and surprise.

Both proceeded to explain that it was essential for the British to maintain control over what was being sent to France.

"In the long run we shall be better off for it," the younger of the two, a mere slip of a girl, assured me.

And the other added: "My baby does not mind some of that new haricot-bean semolina, provided it is sweetened. So I do without my sugar, and all is well."

They left the shop, and the chemist turned to me: "Wonderful, are they not? I used to complain about the difficulties in replenishing some of my stocks, but my customers have taught me wisdom. I scarcely ever hear them grumble. Men are a nuisance sometimes; but women never."

Educators Plan Defense Talk

A conference on education and national defense will be held at 8 o'clock tonight in the National Education Association Building, 1819 M Street Northwest.

Christmas Seals Still to Be Paid For

Dr. J. Winthrop Peabody, president of the District Tuberculosis Association, yesterday revealed that receipts from the annual sale of Christmas seals were about $10,600 short of the $60,000 needed to continue vital services in 1941.

He said the deficiency would be made up easily if all those who have postponed until after the holidays payment for the seals they have received would send in payment now.

2 to Distribute U. S. Red Cross Food in Spain

A retired Army colonel, veteran of a half-dozen campaigns, and a civilian who has battled floods, hurricanes and tornadoes since 1932, will sail for Spain Saturday on the latest mission of mercy of the American Red Cross.

Col. Cary I. Crockett, director of Red Cross relief operation, and Nat C. Wilson, associate director, will sail on the American Export Line's Excalibur, as the first Red Cross representatives to post-revolutionary Spain.

Intrusted with the task of alleviating a situation bordering on actual famine, they will distribute a shipload of wheat flour and milk which will leave New York about January 25 on S. S. Cold Harbor.

President Roosevelt had authorized the Red Cross to make the necessary shipment of supplies to be purchased with funds made available to him for civilian relief.

The Cold Harbor's $1,000,000 cargo will include 750 tons of powdered and condensed milk, 25 tons of clothing and $100,000 worth of drugs, for children, in unoccupied France. Special permission had been arranged for passage through the British blockade.

Col. Crockett is the son of a Confederate soldier, who himself had a considerable Army career. Col. Crockett was an enlisted scout in the Spanish War, he rose to commissioned rank to serve with the Cavalry in Cuba in 1906-7, as Intelligence officer and Infantry commander on the Mexican border in 1916-17, and as assistant chief of staff of the 88th Division in France in 1918.

Wilson, assistant manager of the Eastern area, has been active in every phase of Red Cross work. Serving as general field representative and disaster director, he worked through the following experiences: Alabama tornado of 1932, Florida hurricane of 1933-35, Pennsylvania and Kentucky floods in 1936 and 1937 and throughout Ohio and Mississippi Valley regions.

Take Charge, Mister— and LET'S FIREBALL!

THERE'S a new word spreading through the vocabularies of car owners who have made firsthand acquaintances with this slick new 1941 Buick.

It's a word we first picked out as an apt description of a new and better engine—but it is rapidly coming to mean a completely new and excitingly pleasurable manner of motor-car travel.

All over the country, "to fireball" now means to enjoy both ease and dispatch in your travel by car—with a special new measure of thrift.

Not the ordinary, scrimpy, self-denying sort of thrift, but thrift with all the thrills left in!

Now, just why that happens is easy to understand.

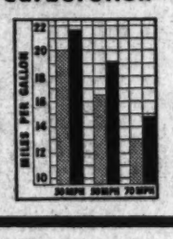
Reenforced by Compound Carburetion* this FIREBALL eight develops nearly 17% more horsepower on exactly the same fuel rationing.

With all that power on call, we can in the first place use a more economical gear ratio as our standard high gear—a ratio that ups miles per gallon by giving more revolutions of the wheels for every revolution of the engine.

Then, in the second place, we have in Compound Carburetion a fuel supply system that adjusts itself according to the driving conditions you meet.

BUICK ECONOMY with Compound Carburetion

Here's how Compound Carburation steps up miles-per-gallon throughout the whole speed range. At 50 miles an hour—a reliable figure to use in estimating over-all mileage for all speeds—you note an increase of a full two miles per gallon, or between 10% and 15%.



In casual, easy, everyday going, a single thrift-size carburetor takes full care of your engine's requirements.

For moments of exceptional need, a reserve carburetor virtually "adds another engine" to meet any other momentary call for power.

Thus your engine is always getting the utmost benefit out of the least amount of gasoline that will give the performance you want.

And that spells economy.

So much economy that a man who drives 15,000 miles a year gets as much as 2,000 miles' extra driving on the same amount of fuel, and without loss of zip, lift, or surging power-flow—economy with some fun to it!

That, Buick buyers are finding, is something entirely new.

So new we think you'd better find out about it, better learn what it means "to fireball" as Buick owners now use that term.

Your Buick dealer, as we've said before, is eager to initiate you. Just give him a ring and he'll fireball around to your house in a jiffy.

BUICK PRICES BEGIN AT $935 for the Business Coupe delivered at Flint, Mich. State tax, optional equipment and accessories—extra. Prices subject to change without notice.

*Optional on the Buick Special; standard on all other series.

Death On The Streets

The outcry resulting from the sudden onset of death by automobile shows that citizens of the District are ready to support stringent corrective measures. The most spectacular is the revival of the "Committee of One Hundred," which was recommended by a committee of the Commissioners' Traffic Advisory Council acting on the suggestion made in a citizen's letter to The Post. Most of the subsequent reaction by readers has been favorable to a plan under which selected citizens are delegated to observe and report dangerous violations of the traffic laws. Traffic Director Van Duzer also approves. However, Inspector Miller, of the Accident Prevention Unit, remarks that he couldn't see "what good it would do," and Police Superintendent Brown says a similar effort had failed here some years ago.

The effort made in 1934 cannot be called an unqualified failure. In the first month of the "Committee of One Hundred," only three persons died because of accidents on Washington streets. In the next month, it is true, 18 fatalities occurred—the most in any 30-day period until the all-time high of 20 between December 12, 1940, and January 13, 1941. But the record of the second month reflected public disgust with certain aspects of the campaign. The secret identity of the committeemen aroused widespread resentment, especially among persons who questioned reports made against them, and demanded to see their accusers. Under the present proposal the names of the "One Hundred" would be published.

A further criticism of the "One Hundred" plan is that the evidence of citizen observers would not carry the same weight as that of trained traffic officers. Even though it is not proposed to take the committeemen's complaints to court, but only to the board which considers suspension of licenses, this criticism has some validity. If, and only if, a hundred citizens of the highest civic reputation and thoroughly familiar with traffic problems can be found ready to serve, the plan is worth a trial.

About the value of other current proposals there is less doubt. The move to ask Congress for more police answers a long recognized need, which has been aggravated here as elsewhere by the increase in traffic as a result of defense effort. The plan for a proving ground for drivers and stricter licensing requirements has merit, as does the idea of an educational campaign. It should be pointed out, however, that mere fulfillment of tests for normal driving, however carefully administered, will not fit a person for operating an automobile on Washington streets. The best intentions in the world, engendered by pep talks and object lessons, will not make a person a safe driver if he is liable to confusion by the amazing complications of the local traffic. Any educational drive, to be effective, would have to include a complete course in the layout of District streets and the diverse regulations applied to them. It might be more useful to simplify the rules and look to the relief of traffic congestion.

One Seat, Two Senators

The appointment of two Senators to fill one vacancy is a minor dilemma for the Senate in these days of world crisis. Nevertheless, the teapot tempest which Clarence E. Martin and Joseph Rosier have brought to Washington from West Virginia will be watched with much interest. For no two rival claimants have ever knocked at the door of the Senate under precisely the same circumstances.

Retiring Gov. Holt of West Virginia was so eager to have Mr. Martin in the Senate that he appointed him three different times. It may develop, however, that three appointments are less effective than one. By repeating his order several times Gov. Holt seems tacitly to have acknowledged that his first efforts to appoint Mr. Martin were invalid. Indeed, when he first attempted to name a successor to Senator Matthew M. Neely, the new Governor who was equally intent on naming Mr. Rosier, it was obvious that no vacancy existed.

The question with which the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections must wrestle is whether the seat in question ever became vacant while Mr. Holt was Governor of West Virginia. Mr. Neely submitted his resignation as Senator to become effective at midnight of January 12. Before that moment there was no vacancy, and after that moment Mr. Holt was no longer Governor. The weakness of Mr. Martin's claim is that the last appointment given him was dated "the first moment" of January 13. By that time Mr. Holt's successor had been sworn in and had full control over the powers Mr. Holt attempted to exercise.

Some appointments to the Senate have been made in anticipation of vacancies. But never before has the Governor attempted to fill a Senate seat which has become vacant at the moment his term expires. On the other hand, the effort of Senator Neely to name his successor in the Senate is not unique. Gov. Moore of New Jersey appointed his successor after handing in his resignation as Senator in January, 1938, without becoming involved in controversy.

The strangest aspect of the case is that Senator Neely did not postpone his resignation as Senator until after he had taken the oath as Governor. West Virginia's constitution provides that no executive officer of that State shall hold any other office during the term of his service. But where individuals have attempted to hold two offices, the courts have merely required them to relinquish one or the other. Certainly Mr. Neely could have clung to his senatorial toga long enough to eliminate all question as to the right of Gov. Holt to make the appointment. In view of that fact, it is not to be supposed that this controversy will add many gray hairs to the heads of Senators.

Below The Belt

Such below-the-belt remarks as the "plow under" crack of Senator Wheeler will bring more support to the lend-lease bill than they will take away. But the President's indignation is justifiable. To Mr. Roosevelt, as Mr. Willkie has acknowledged, the country has given a mandate to provide a dynamic of democracy in the most critical period in world history. For a brief spell after the election the Nation felt let down because no attempt seemed to be made to assume it. But the President took up the challenge as soon as he came back from his Caribbean trip. The means for providing the needed dynamic are drastic, indeed. Yet something like those means must be passed on to the White House as the only method for winning back a pattern for our national life free from fear and bristling armament. Our concern in the next few weeks should be to insure, insofar as we are able, that the President is fortified while he is filling his tremendous role by the national will and by the best counsel. Only a constructive approach to the lend-lease bill, stemming from a recognition of the mandate at the polls, will justify the President's own effort to seek collaboration. If he didn't get it, the future historian would say of us that at the testing time our representative institutions were found wanting in viability, let alone vitality. In this high moment at least the demagoguery should be squeezed out of our democracy.

Stalin Stalling

Ever since Hitler occupied Rumania and began to transform that nation into a Nazi military base, one of the great unanswered questions of the war has been what Russia was prepared to do if, as was widely anticipated, Hitler continued his "Drang nach Osten" by moving into Bulgaria. The Kremlin could assent to such a move by the Third Reich in return for a quid pro quo of some kind. Or Russia could forcibly resist a development on the ground that, with Germany astride the Dardanelles, and thus in control of the only passageway between the Black Sea and the Mediterranean, the security of the Soviet Union would be imperiled.

Premier Bogdan Philoff at Ruschuk on Sunday declared that his country was determined to stay out of war, but "is ready to fight at any moment if her independence and interests are threatened." If this means anything at all, it means that the Sofia government does not propose to invite Germany to occupy Bulgaria, but in the event of a German invasion intends to offer at least a show of resistance. Since Bulgaria is in no position to resist for long, her only chance of coping successfully with a German move would rest upon her neighbors, particularly Turkey and Russia.

Would Russia come to Bulgaria's assistance? There is no evidence of the affirmative in a current Tass communique. Acknowledging rumors that German troops are in Bulgaria, and that "the dispatch of German troops to Bulgaria really is taking place," Tass says that "all this occurred and is occurring without the knowledge and consent of the U. S. S. R., since the German side never raised before the U. S. S. R. the question of the presence or dispatch of German troops in Bulgaria." The communique then adds "the Bulgarian government never approached the U. S. S. R. with an inquiry regarding the passage of German troops to Bulgaria and consequently could not have received any reply from the U. S. S. R."

The possibility cannot be excluded that Germany will send troops into Bulgaria anyway, but the Tass message suggests the likelihood that, if they are sent, Russia will do nothing. Moscow could argue that without a Bulgarian request for assistance, her hands were tied. The communique is also an indirect reminder to Germany that Russia is watching the situation and must be taken into account. Previously Russia by concluding a far-reaching trade agreement with the Reich had made clear her readiness to cooperate with Germany whenever Russian interests ran parallel with those of that country.

In making that deal with Hitler, Stalin may, indeed, have secured as a political quid pro quo a promise from the Fuehrer to let Bulgaria alone, at least for the time being. But even if he did not, the trade agreement makes it necessary for Hitler to pay some attention to Russia's interests in the Balkans. And the denial by Sofia that any foreign troops have crossed the Bulgarian frontier indicates that Russia's stalling tactics in the Balkans are thus far succeeding.

James Joyce

The problem of James Joyce relates not so much to his contribution to literature as to his contribution to language. This is a point which most of his critics appear to have overlooked. Joyce, seen merely as a novelist, could be fairly described as a self-centered genius who devoted his whole life and his incomparable gifts to the work of translating universal experience into terms of his own rather narrow personality. This, of course, is an audacious inversion of the function of literature. That Joyce should end by rendering himself unintelligible, without the aid of keys, commentaries and what not, may seem no more than ironic justice.

Joyce, the novelist, has been and always must be caviare to the generality of readers. But there is no denying or doubting that his earlier books, and especially "A Portrait of the Artist," have been carefully studied by other and lesser men, who have borrowed from his method as much or little as they required. Whether, as some insist, Joyce developed, independently of Freud, the Freudian concept of experience, or whether he was merely one of the first to adapt it to the purposes of narrative, or whether even in this he was anticipated by the now forgotten Dorothy Richardson, is of no particular interest or importance. What is important is that, if Joyce had followed another method, the method of the novelists of the 1920's and 1930's would have been wholly different.

Whether the influence of Joyce upon the novel as such has now spent its force, it is much too early to say. It is quite possible that the subjective trend in literature which began under the influence of Rousseau has been fetched by the followers of Joyce to an anarchic dead end. In "Finnegan's Wake" Joyce may seem to have fetched language itself to a similar dead end of anarchy. He may seem to have sought to destroy language by destroying the meanings of words. But the truth is that meanings of English words are altogether too precise, too exclusively intellectual, and that we have tended more and more to employ them as if they were coins having fixed and settled values in the mind. A language in which that happens is in a fair way to becoming a dead language.

A language thus congealed becomes suitable to the purposes of liturgy, to the documentation of laws, to the teaching of philosophy, because it will mean the same to all men. But in such a language poetry is no longer possible, for it is the nature of poetry to be fluid and free. It is on poetry, whether spoken or written, that the changing idioms of a living language feed. Because Joyce, whatever his frivolity and egocentricity, was first of all a poet, he attempted to release the language from the fetters of the abstract and precise, and to lead it into areas of feeling and experience from which it had hitherto been excluded. And so, if the language survives and grows, a time may come when men will no more demand to know precisely what Joyce meant by "the rivering waters of, the hitherandthithering waters" than we demand to know exactly what Homer meant by his "hollow ships" and his "wine-dark sea."

PORTRAIT OF TWO MINDS

The garden of your mind is kept in order,
Each plant is tended carefully, just so;
Each path correctly made, and every border
Taught with exacting science how to grow.
How you would scorn my careless plot of garden,
Planted with reckless hand, and without reason;
Its wild disorder you would never pardon,
Its paths that often bloom at the wrong season.
Wild gourds have long since overgrown my fountain,
And honeysuckle broken down my wickets,
Tansy and cockscomb, tall snow-on-the-mountain,
Twisted with grapevines, form wild tangled thickets.
And wanton, tall and bright, the sunflower glows,
Towering above the lily and the rose.

Readers' Reactions On Traffic

"Splendid Suggestion"

Mr. Drayton has a splendid suggestion in his letter to The Post and one which demands the support of the Police Department, the newspapers, schools, churches and civic organizations. The honest, law-abiding citizens of Washington can help reduce accidents and the grief which accompanies them by making it a part of their civic responsibility to report the license numbers of traffic violators plus all available information necessary to prove their guilt.

Last Friday evening while driving down Sixteenth Street, a reckless driver cut in along side of a car in front of me and damaged the fenders on this car and almost caused a wreck involving one or two other cars while dashing away at high speed.

The job of reducing accidents caused by reckless driving is a co-operative one in which law-abiding drivers and pedestrians and the Police Department should join hands and work together. Why not get behind Mr. Drayton's suggestion and let's organize a citizens' committee to help catch and punish reckless drivers and thus reduce accidents and traffic fatalities.

GORDON FINLEY.
Washington, Jan. 12.

Who Are The Killers?

Who do most of the fast, dangerous driving, commit the bulk of the traffic misdemeanors and inflict most of the wholesale slaughter?

Folks of worth and moral integrity whose arrival at some destination is of any importance to anything or anyone?

No, the direct opposite. Lazy adults and adolescents with time to kill, who are not averse to doing the same to a few pedestrians if the pedestrians block their progress in their mad rush to nowhere.

But almost always the driver to blame escapes unscathed and is allowed by the decaying civilization of which he is an unsavory by-product to continue on his way, unrepentent, unreformed, to continue his career as a public menace, unrestrained.

Pedestrian Speaks

It is highly possible that I am the pedestrian Mr. C. D. Drayton referred to in his front page letter to The Post concerning reckless drivers, for on Friday morning, January 10, I got off a bus at Twelfth and K Streets Northwest, started across K on the green light in front of the bus and was nearly knocked down by a Maryland car which passed the bus on the left and turned down Twelfth against the red light. A second later and I would have been clear of the bus and directly in the path of the car, which was moving at about 35 m. p. h., I should say. My bus driver undoubtedly saw this incident.

It occurred to me then, and I pass it along for what it is worth, that bus drivers and streetcar operators might be made quasi-official reporters of this sort of dangerous traffic violation to the Police Department. A vigilance committee does not seem a desirable step in a day when folk are all too apt to jump at conclusions. But operators of common carriers are bonded and responsible to their company and the public and moreover, they would always have witnesses to agree or disagree. Such a plan, though not all-encompassing, perhaps would tend to discourage the reckless driver from violating the law in the vicinity of a bus or streetcar at least, and thus pave the way for a greater and much needed campaign against this increasing menace.

For Sure Penalties

Noting Mr. Charles D. Drayton's letter in The Post of January 12 brings to mind my several abortive attempts to arouse some interest in the welfare of the pedestrians in this town.

I, too, have written to the director of traffic, several newspapers (yours not included) and the Police Department suggesting my ideas for curbing the criminal slaughter. One of your contemporaries published part of one letter, and the police brought in a man whom I reported for striking a pedestrian, but, in spite of his admission of guilt on two or more counts, he was released, and I was severely criticized for failure (as a witness, mind you!) to prosecute him.

Too much stress, indeed, is placed on the failure of the pedestrian to observe the "control laws," whereas little or no attention is paid to the gross failure of a large percentage of motorists to observe any vehicular laws.

One newspaper stated that during last December 44 motorists were arrested for failure to give right of way to pedestrians. I can point out, any single day, 200 such transgressions at each of 50 or more corners in this town.

This same article noted arrest of 149 motorists—in December—for going through red lights. I can show 500 in any business day at Dupont Circle alone.

In my recommendations I included strict enforcement of existing laws, and positive penalities for first and each subsequent offense, with no lenience because of position, wealth or politics.

If all motorists knew that any transgression of the traffic laws would definitely bring a penalty, there would not be five deaths from such causes in a year.

I also suggested that all police, regardless of their stated assignments should be required to enforce traffic laws, whether in or out of uniform, on or off duty.

I have been told that the reason so few arrests are made is that pedestrians are slow to prosecute. Must the police have such help in punishing offenses they witness?

It is my belief that all left turns on main arteries should be prohibited.

If the "powers that be" are sincere in their efforts, they can prevent 90 per cent of the fatalities.

In Hearty Accord

I am in hearty accord with the viewpoint expressed by Mr. Charles D. Drayton. I suggested his plan some years ago to the service clubs (Rotary, etc.) in Washington, being a member of one at that time. However, no interest was shown and the matter was dropped.

The idea Mr. Drayton has in mind is very similar to one in use then in Memphis, Tenn., if my memory serves me right. There, when a citizen is the eyewitness of a traffic violation he immediately notes the license number of the vehicle, time, place and date of violation and sends the facts to the Police Department who, in turn, notify the owner of the vehicle that his (or her) disregard of the law, etc. has been noticed and they suggest that he (or she) mend his ways. His (or her) name is kept on file and if a second violation is reported, a stronger note is sent out. On a third violation the police pay a personal call on the party, who is warned that if he (or she) is reported again or happens to be in an accident the police records will show he (or she) to be a reckless driver and action will be taken accordingly.

Some plan along the above lines I believe would materially help the situation here.

Arlington And The District

I wish to congratulate The Post for its editorial stand on the relationship of Arlington to the District, and especially on the editorial of January 11, "Orderly City Planning," in which there is reference to the speech of Chairman Delano of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

When my husband and I came to Washington in September, 1939, we settled in the District, thinking that we should be closer to the center of the community. But when we began to look for a site on which to build a new home, we discovered that the site which we eventually selected in Aurora Hills, Arlington, was only half as far from the center of the city as almost any point we had looked at in Chevy Chase, and that there were only a third or a quarter as many traffic lights. Except at rush hours, when there is a short bottleneck at the Fourteenth Street Bridge, we drive to downtown Washington in ten minutes.

Our primary reason for living in Arlington is to be closer to the center of our community and the Federal building in which my husband works, and yet oddly enough we must live in a governmental jurisdiction different from that of the community of which we feel a part. My husband earns the family living in Washington; we spend most of our money in Washington; we are members of Washington organizations; most of our friends live in Washington; and we go to Washington for all of our recreation outside the home. Washington is the community and Arlington the neighborhood in which we live.

To me it seems obvious that Arlington should be a part of the District, and I believe that the retrocession of Arlington to Virginia is now very generally recognized as a grave mistake. Since Arlington is rightly unwilling to become a part of a voteless community, it seems obvious that residents of Arlington should work for suffrage for the District so that this inequality may be removed and the way made clear for the incorporation of Arlington into the community of which it is a part. In the meantime, suffrage in Arlington will have a very limited meaning to those of us who feel that we are citizens of the larger community.

The necessity of including Arlington in the planning of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission should be apparent to the least sensitive person who drives down Columbia Pike or Route No. 1 and across the bridge into the jurisdiction of the District. Washington is a beautiful dressed lady below whose hem a ragged, dirty petticoat is showing.

Impressed as I am with the urgency for planning the future of this rapidly growing Capital community, I sincerely hope that the cry of The Post will grow ever louder and that its sound analysis and vision will play a great part in causing lawmakers and officials to look beyond the arbitrary boundaries of the District to the welfare of the whole community. One of the most needed reforms in local government everywhere is the abolition of jurisdictions which at one time may have served well, but which have become anachronisms with the growth of large urban communities. Why cannot the Capital City lead for a change instead of following?

Letters From Home

IT'S FULL of surprises and suspense, this being away from home and getting mail.

You're surprised, in the first place, to discover how important the mail is to you and how frustrated you feel when you come home from work and find not so much as a single white oblong lying on the hall table. Not that you're homesick or anything like that. Don't be silly.

Still, it's a bit surprising to find what fascinating reading it is that the juniors are giving their class play next week and that your mother served at the church supper last Sunday night. They had baked ham, escalloped potatoes, perfection salad, dill pickles, hot rolls and apple pie. Cleared $18.75.

Two successive days and no mail, and frustration turns to resentment, strongly tinged with self-pity. Sure, everybody was going to write real often, and now look at them. A lot they care about you. Out of sight, out of mind, all right. And here you've been breaking your neck to send back long, interesting letters about your experiences in Washington. Then three letters come at once and all is forgiven.

As correspondents your friends show up in a new light. Your quiet little bookkeeper friend writes colorful, entertaining, thoroughly satisfying letters. The friend who is an English teacher, and whose letters you looked forward to, scratches off a couple of pages without a thing in them. At least you don't think there is anything in them—the writing is so bad that you can't be sure.

It turns out that most of your "good" friends are the most desultory in their correspondence and it's the people you never expected to hear from who crop up with nice long letters. You may not necessarily have intended to keep up a correspondence with these latter, but they are so chatty and industrious that you are morally bound to hold up your end of it, wondering the while why you do it. So here you are, writing long, newsy missives to people whom you hardly ever saw when you were home.

They may be the people who took you out to lunch before you left or who chipped in on a going-away present for you at the office. You drop them a card or a little note just to show your appreciation. That's very nice and courteous of you, but they are courteous people, too, and they counter with a note of their own, thanking you for your note and then adding enough news items to make it practically a letter and thereby placing it right in the problem class. If you consider the matter ended and don't reply, word will get around your old home town that now that Agnes has gone to Washington she's too good to write to anybody back home any more. And so, if you value your fair name, you write.

That rather scrawly handwriting doesn't show up in the mail very often, but in spite of its rarity you pick up the envelope more with apprehension than anticipation for experience has long ago taught you that Brother George never takes pen in hand from mere sociability, but only when he has a little favor to ask. Would you go to the library and see how much dope they have on something or other? Hate to rush you, but if it isn't too much trouble could you get it to me by Thursday? Better send it air mail special delivery. Sure, brother, no trouble at all.

There are laboriously penned communications from young nieces and nephews—laboriously not only in the penmanship but also, obviously, in the thought which has gone into them. You can visualize the youthful brows furrowed in the search for something to write to an aunt who, while still pretty hale and hearty, undoubtedly seems to them as old as the hills. And in the close background you discern the outlines of their mother, sternly admonishing them that they simply must write and thank Aunt Agnes for that birthday present. Tonight, mind you, and no more excuses.

There are letters from close relatives, packed with news but of a sort that stands your hair on end and leaves you dismayed by the series of catastrophes that has blighted the town. The sudden deaths by heart failure, the violent deaths in automobile accidents, the common, ordinary deaths, convince you that the population must be severely diminished. Mrs. Jones has had a serious operation—don't know whether she will pull through or not. Grandma Smith slipped on the ice and broke her hip—you know what that means at her age. The youngest Hill boy shot himself in the leg while hunting.

The Perkins grocery store has failed and everyone is wondering what the Perkins family will do now, and Mrs. Perkins is not a bit well. The Hansens have lost their farm on a mortgage. Joe Brown has lost his job. Taxes will be bigger than ever this year and everyone is wondering where the money is coming from. Mary Johnson finally married that fellow she's been running around with who doesn't amount to anything and they've moved in with Mary's folks, who, goodness knows, have more than they can handle already. Everyone feels sorry for poor Mrs. Johnson.

There is nothing like reading newspaper headlines and letters from home to make you feel that all's right with the world.

You feel almost wicked to reflect that you have your health, a steady job, a nice landlady and are thoroughly enjoying yourself. Partly to alleviate your sense of guilt and partly because you know Aunt Emma as well as you do, in your next letter to her you find you have a distinct tendency to dwell on how much overtime you've had to put in, how grouchy your supervisor is, how bad the weather has been, how expensive it is living in Washington, and you think you might be coming down with a cold, you haven't been feeling so good the last couple of days. Aunt Emma can thoroughly understand and sympathize with such a state of things. "I guess they have their troubles in Washington just like any place else," you can hear her remarking, not without a certain degree of satisfaction.

You don't really mind, though, no matter how little they say, how many favors they ask, how dolorous the news they impart. You forgive them all—if they just keep on writing.

HORTENSE HALL.

On The Record

By Dorothy Thompson

Mr. Willkie's Voyage

MR. WILLKIE, by insisting on being an American and a realistic patriot before he is a Republican, may well be saving the political future of that ill-starred party, which suffers more from its friends than from its enemies. Acting now, as a citizen, Mr. Willkie continues along the line of the policy that he advocated as a candidate—a policy that many of his copartisans did their best to wreck, and succeeded, during the campaign, in confusing.

The attitude of many Republicans during the campaign was that we are only platonically affected by the world-wide crisis which the war has precipitated, a crisis involving the whole Eastern Hemisphere, and Canada on this continent, and involving at the same time the lives, fortunes and every political, economic, social and humane value of all the nations that have hitherto constituted what we roughly call "Western civilization."

Mr. Willkie believed, and believes, in contradiction to Mr. Taft and Mr. Dewey, for instance, that the crisis involves us no less intimately and desperately in the long run than it involves every other nation.

AND HE REFUSED to accept the advice freely tendered him by many Republican politicians to campaign on a pure isolationist basis, as a "certain way to get elected." For, I think, Mr. Willkie knew that election on an untrue premise would give him an impotent victory.

He also, I think, sensed the majority opinion of the country better than those of his advisers; whose parallel anti-Roosevelt campaigns created the utmost distrust and confusion and led to the widespread doubt whether the candidate really meant what he said, and whether, if elected, he would be able to exercise real leadership over his party.

Now, this much is certain: No other individual in the Republican ranks enjoys as much popular support as Mr. Willkie; no other individual can claim any such mandate from the rank-and-file membership of the party, over the whole country, regardless of region or economic class; for no other individual in the party ever was chosen for President by 22,000,000 votes.

Both by tradition, which makes the former candidate the leader of the party, and by this fact, Mr. Willkie remains the party leader. And in the Senate, Senator Austin is the accredited Republican leader.

It does not make a man a party leader or a party spokesman to have been defeated, as Senator Taft and Mr. Dewey were, for the nomination.

AND AMERICANS should be profoundly happy and relieved by the fact that the two most vigorous political leaders in the country, President Roosevelt and Wendell Willkie, are not at loggerheads regarding the attitude that this country should take toward the foreign situation, nor regarding the necessity for unification of executive command in the present crisis. Mr. Willkie's reservations regarding the bill in question are worthy of every consideration. They are reservations and amendments, not an assault on the bill as a whole.

And again, Mr. Willkie is showing intellectual clarity and honesty. For he knows that were he President, as he came not far from being, he would need approximately these powers to achieve an objective which he believes to be essential to the preservation of American freedom. And, in being willing to support for his opponent what he would have needed for himself, he raises, not diminishes, his stature.

SO, TOO, his decision to go abroad, and to inform himself at first hand, to study at short range and with a longer view, the immediate and further possibilities which may arise out of the events of this struggle, is in refreshing contrast to the provincial attitude displayed by some, who, attempting to be leaders in a crisis of immense proportions, display in many of their public addresses an ignorance that is depressing.

Mr. Willkie's attitude, as expressed in his recent statement, that all the institutions of the United States, including the institution of private enterprise, are at stake on the outcome of this struggle, corresponds to logical and historical reality.

Nor is this reality removed by the probability touched upon several times in this column, that the course of the struggle will lead to far-reaching modifications in the economic and social system of all countries, whatever the outcome of the war.

That the capitalistic system, so-called, will undergo further modification under any circumstance is, I think, a certainty. In saying so, one makes, of necessity, no advocacy.

The demand of society that the resources of nature and the gifts of science, technology, and rational industry be so fully used as radically to relieve the indignity and insecurity of wageworkers whose only property is their work, will not evaporate; and the pressure of that demand and the mandate of intelligence and conscience had already, before the war began, led to the establishment of mixed economies, partly capitalistic and partly socialistic, in every highly civilized industrial country from Sweden to the United States. I believe that the necessities of the war will even further modify the picture. But the totalitarianism of communism and nazism do not modify the picture, but eclipse it utterly.

MR. WILLKIE, who has a much freer mind than many of his partisans, has indicated on many occasions that he is aware of this, as he is aware that the possibility of change without eclipse depends to an unreckonable extent on the ability of a sufficient number of national states to preserve their independence and freedom of movement.

He would never throw the political, social and economic theories and objectives of Hitler, Stalin, Mussolini, Roosevelt—and, for instance, Mr. Ernest Bevin—into the same pot and call them all one and the same thing.

THAT MR. WILLKIE has gone as far as he has to help achieve national unity and that he sets out adventurously to widen his horizons is a fine thing, and all of us can profit by his example.

Old Phrases Trotted Out

By Ernest K. Lindley

You Can't Please All

FOR MONTHS the President was criticized for not delegating to a single agency the full power and responsibility for directing the production of weapons for national defense.

Now that he has done that, in the Office of Production Management, he is being criticized because he put at the head of it two men instead of one. Efficient administration, his critics insist, requires that there be only one "boss." The "boss" can receive all the advice he desires, but must have the authority to make final decisions, and make them quickly if necessary, without wasting time in persuading others that his decisions are correct.

Now, suddenly, a new theme is sounded. The President has asked Congress for a certain discretionary power, in the aid-to-the-Allies bill. Now he is told that he is asking Congress to abdicate its duties. All the old phrases about dictatorship and power-grabbing are being trotted out. And they are being paraded, in some instances, by the same people who, a few days ago, were attacking the President for not giving Knudsen enough power.

There obviously can be no theory or understanding of government, good administration, military strategy, or anything else behind these gymnastics.

IN POINT OF FACT, the discretion given to the President in the aid-to-the-Allies bill only makes it easier for him to do what he already can do, and has done, by more involved methods. And it does not go beyond the formula of giving the Allies all aid possible short of war, a formula advocated by both major party Presidential candidates, and which every other scrap of available evidence indicates is overwhelmingly favored by the American people.

Since the Neutrality Act was amended in 1939 we have been providing the Allies with munitions of many varieties. Some have been made to order by private manufacturers. But others have come out of the stocks of our own armed services.

Our services have turned over to the Allies both planes which they already had received and planes which they were about to receive. After Dunkerque, the Army released large stocks of light arr , light artillery and ammunition. We released to the British our best bomb sight. We traded 50 destroyers for naval bases.

All this has been done by the President under existing law. And, except for a passing complaint that the destroyer-base deal should have been submitted to Congress, there has been no serious criticism. There is not much that we have or are about to get in the line of war implements which the President, under existing law, cannot turn over to the Allies. The bill now before Congress permits him to do it simply and directly, without resort to legal subterfuge.

SECONDLY, the bill permits him to decide what, if anything, we shall receive in return for the weapons turned over to the Allies. Within limits, he already has that power. The Administration fixed the price at which stocks of our Army were turned over to the British and the French. In the destroyer deal, the compensation was not reducible to terms of money.

When the President and Wendell Willkie advocated aid to the Allies they obviously did not mean that it depended on the ability of the Allies to reimburse us in cash. Their thesis was that the defense of Britain was to the interest of the United States.

Alf Landon has advocated an outright subsidy to the British, and others have proposed that we make them presents of whatever they need. The British and their allies still have, however, many things which we need or may earnestly desire. There should be some leeway for bargaining.

The British and their allies have, to begin with, large dollar resources which they have not used. Congress might well require that these be posted as collateral, leaving it to the President's discretion whether, when those resources are exhausted, we should ask for any further compensation.

IT IS VITAL, however, that not only the Allies, but their enemies and the nonbelligerent nations should know that the production of weapons for the Allies is our settled national policy, and that it is not limited by their capacity to pay. Passage of the bill will give this assurance.

Where the weapons which we produce can be best used at any particular time is wholly a military question. It is a decision which must rest with the Commander-in-Chief of the armed forces.

Opening our shipyards to the British navy for repairs is a new step. But it is clear enough that every ship the British can put back into service promptly by sending it over here for repairs reduces the pressure on us to sell or give more of our ships, or to use them for convoying supplies across the Atlantic. Whatever international law says about it, this is not a step which brings us into belligerent physical contact with the Axis.

Looked at calmly, the aid-to-the-Allies bill does not give much ground for criticism except to the minority who still hope to overrule not only the election, but the national conventions of both major parties.

Triangular Race

By Barnet Nover

Nearing The Climax

AS MATTERS stand today the war can be summarized as a triangular race between German preparations for an all-out attack on Great Britain, British and Greek efforts to eliminate Italy as a combatant, and American production of planes and war material.

So far as Germany is concerned, the question is no longer whether she will risk everything in a frontal assault on Great Britain, but when she will do so. Last fall, after the failure of Goering's Luftwaffe to bring the British to their knees, Hitler could still envisage the alternative course of a German-Italian drive to the east and with it the severance of Britain's lifeline in the Mediterranean and the acquisition by the Axis of the invaluable oil wells of Irak.

That line of action is no longer feasible. Hitler's Balkan maneuvers of recent days are probably inspired far more by the desire to protect Germany's rear and flank when the assault on Britain is launched than by any immediate ambitions to overrun Turkey and the Near East. With Italy staggering under the blows she has suffered in Albania and Africa, Hitler must now reckon with the possibility of Italy's ultimate elimination from the war as an active combatant.

IT IS OBVIOUSLY to Germany's interest to prevent that from happening or, if it proves inevitable, to postpone it as long as possible. It is not to Germany's interest to pull Mussolini's chestnuts out of the fire if, in so doing, the Reich's strength is depleted to the point where she could not hope to carry out a successful blitzkrieg against Great Britain.

That is why the assistance which Hitler has rendered Mussolini has thus far been limited in quantity and of a type which has far more Germany's than Italy's interest in mind.

The paramount necessity for Germany is not so much to prevent a British victory in the Mediterranean but to prevent Great Britain from capitalizing the victories she and Greece have already gained. This means, among other things, keeping the British fleet or any major part of that fleet from leaving the Mediterranean and thus increasing the naval defenses in British home waters. To that end Germany, while refusing actively to participate in the African war, where Italy's position is almost desperate, has helped Italy by sending dive-bombers, which appear to have been successful in harassing British lines of communications in the Middle Sea. Proof of this is to be found in the admission by the British admiralty that three British warships were damaged by German and Italian bombers the other day.

SO LONG AS ITALY continues to have a nuisance value, so long as Italy remains a combatant, though a diminishingly effective one, and thus compels the British to divide their forces between the home sector and the Mediterranean front, Germany is in a position to round out her preparations for the assault on the British citadel in relative leisure. We can be sure that these preparations are being made with the greatest care and with full use of the resources of the nations Germany has conquered as well as the resources of the Reich itself.

In the meantime, the balance in the war of attrition is not to Britain's advantage. It may be that the destruction of military objectives in Great Britain has been far less in proportion to the total destruction produced by German bombers than anyone had a right to expect when the assault began. Nonetheless, there is no denying that the British are suffering, and suffering seriously, from that continuous attack. The deficit in British production, the extra production she needs to catch up with Germany, can only be made good from American sources. And if it is to be made good in time to help Great Britain fend off the German thrust the aid must come soon and in ever-increasing quantities. Speed is of the essence, for delay may be fatal.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Another Primo Carnera

WHENEVER Harold L. (for Lovable) Ickes wants to be especially mean to me he recalls that I used to be a sports writer, and there are times when this hurts my feelings, because, after all, it does my store no good to have him walking up and down in front carrying a sign that says my thoughts are just the ignorant musings of a dese, dose and dem guy with a cauliflower mind. Everybody has to get started some way, don't they? Ickes seems to think Stalin is pretty good, but Stalin got his start robbing banks and President Roosevelt was a Wall Street lawyer, and you might say that explains his knack for getting around the Constitution without breaking it.

But other days, like today, it just seems that if we had a lot of sports writers analyzing what you might call the situation it would make it easier for everybody to understand how things are going, because everybody knows pretty much about sports, but you start telling them about Machiavelli and they think he is a violinist.

SO, LIKE I say, if a cosmic observer gives out about Napoleon or the Twenty-seven Years War, nine out of ten customers will brush on by, because it reminds them of when they were in school, but if you give them someone like Primo Carnera they will pay attention to learn something. So Mr. Ickes can cut class today while I draw a parallel between Primo, or Old Satch, as we used to call him, and the Duce of the new Italian empire.

When Old Satch came over here he was grabbed off by a bunch of the boys, and they gave him a big buildup to make him look terrific, as we say. They remembered that Luis Angel Firpo had been called the Wild Bull of the Pampas, so they call Satch the Wild Boar and they had a picture of a wild boar embroidered on his ring pants. But that didn't go so good, because they forgot to let Primo in on the gag, so when Paul Gallico asked him about the meaning of the boar Satch laughed and said: "Oh, you mean da leetla peeg? Sheeza nawthing. Sheeze joosta leetle peeg for make pretty da pants."

I don't write dialect very well, but you get the idea.

WELL, the boys did a wonderful business with Satch. In the first place, they all knew he was a terrible bum, so they took no chances. Just as Mussolini selected round heels for his opponents in Ethiopia and Albania and insisted on a no-decision contest in Spain, Primo's mob used extreme care in their match-making. They went around the country digging up old retired bums of a class known to pugilism as drytank men, divers or splashers, meaning guys who could be relied on to take a plunge at the word of command. They put on the splash from coast to coast.

One night in New York the manager of a tanker got fresh, demanding a little extra money and threatening to have his dummy mess up Old Satch, so they locked him in his hotel room while, over in the garden, Old Satch gave his chump the push. Another time, in Philadelphia, a boxing inspector got ethical in the dressing room, demanding an honest, high-spirited struggle, so they conked him with a board and stuffed him in a clothes locker until after.

BUT IN California they had an accident when an old colored man named Bombo Chevalier got ornery and chased Old Satch around and like to ran him bowlegged. Between rounds they tried a little persuasion in Bombo's corner, but Bombo was out of control and he gave Satch a terrible evening. After that Satch never was the same, and the first time he ever met a real fighter Joe Louis just slew him, because he was only a bum.

This brings us to Mussolini's fuss with Greece. In Greece he sent around one of his mob, a guy named Grazzi, who used to be consul general in New York, to tell Metaxas he would have to take a dive, and Grazzi told the Duce that the fix was in. But, like Bombo Chevalier, the Greeks got sore, and the first thing you know they were beating the ears off the big bum, so now he has Hitler tearing around the ring and threatening to murder Greece if they don't hold still and catch one. But even if the Germans do lay out the Greeks in the alley for this, that won't ever do the Duce any good.

Once a dictator is made a bum of he is a bum forever, and Benito Mussolini will go down in history as the Old Satch of the empire business.

The Congressional Picture

A FAIRLY CUT-and-dried Congressional picture already appears to be emerging from the first turmoil over the President's lease-lend bill to aid Britain. All prognosticators agree the House will soon approve the bill, although the high percentage of indecision among the anonymous membership may result in some amendments. A vociferous Senate minority is preparing to talk long and loudly in opposition, but even in the Senate the auguries are pretty favorable.

The Senate will be the chief arena of battle because talk is the opposition's only weapon, and the House rules do not permit its use. And on the whole, the Senate situation is rather better than it was in the autumn of 1939, when the President demanded repeal of the arms embargo.

In the first place, the death of Senator Key Pittman, of Nevada, has made Senator Walter F. George chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Pittman, in legislative combat, was both touchy and unreliable. George, an extremely able man, is of course personally out of sympathy with the President and has sometimes inclined not to support his foreign policy. But he is an old and close friend of Secretary of State Cordell Hull, and recently he and Hull have passed many hours discussing the harsh realities of the world situation at unnoticed breakfast and late afternoon conferences at Hull's quiet hotel apartment. George is now prepared to captain the Senate fight for the bill. He will be far more effective than Pittman would have been.

THEN, TOO, since George is without Pittman's touchiness, he will accept the help the captain of a big fight always needs, but which Pittman often resented or rejected. The general system of Senate leadership has been greatly improved, on the motion of Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley. The elevation of the foxy Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi to be President Pro Tem of the Senate has formally associated him with Barkley. Barkley, Harrison and the remarkably shrewd Senator James F. Byrnes, of South Carolina, now form a working triumvirate.

Finally, although the election did not reduce the isolationist bloc, and brought into the Senate such men as "Curly" Brooks, of Illinois, it did strengthen the President's influence among the rank-and-file Democrats. A surprising number of Republicans, following serious Warren R. Austin, of Vermont, are ready to go along if, as expected, certain amendments are adopted. Thus the opposition to the bill will have to buck a strong majority, strongly led.

Such are the basic facts of the Congressional situation. The daily excitements reported in the headlines do not change them. Indeed, they only provide an interesting demonstration of Congressional behaviorism, not wholly lacking in ironic humor. All the motions are being gone through. As determined opposition always do, the opposition is organizing closely. As opposition leaders invariably do, Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, has announced that he and his friends will never, never filibuster. And as opposition attacks generally are, the opposition attack is primarily a series of sideswipes.

ALMOST NOTHING has been said on the basic issue, whether this country should, or should not, aid Britain by all methods short of war. Instead, the President's bill has been denounced for three reasons: (1) that the British still have ample cash, and thus need no help; (2) that the bill confers too broad discretionary powers on the President, and (3) that the President has taken the "road to war" without first exploring the possibilities of peace.

The rumors of British riches, now causing some havoc in the House, will presumably be set at rest by Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr. He has intended for more than a month to present to Congress a simplified version of the British balance sheet given him by Sir Frederick Phillips on behalf of the exchequer. It will show the British running out of free dollar exchange and realizable securities, but with some remaining frozen and semifrozen assets in this country. Gradual liquidation of these so-called "direct investments" will be promised by Morgenthau. Thus the first argument will be answered. As for the second, the ablest possible answer has already been made to it by Wendell L. Willkie. Certain amendments limiting the President's powers, such as a requirement of a certificate of necessity from the chiefs of the defense services, may be adopted to meet the second argument still more effectively.

FINALLY, there is the third argument, the clamor for a negotiated peace. This has already had some odd results. Not to mention Verne Marshall, or Senator Wheeler's difficulty with peace terms, there is the curious case of Senator Vandenberg. Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg is the author of a whole book, "The Trail of a Tradition," devoted to flowery compliments to the chieftains of opposition to the League of Nations. Yet Senator Vandenberg now takes the position that if peace in Europe can be negotiated, he will consent to a United States guarantee of the peace settlement—precisely the feature of League covenant that caused its defeat. Even the President disapproves of such far-reaching foreign entanglements.

Among the opposition, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, of Massachusetts, is one of the few to take a wholly consistent line. He has been strong for national defense, and deserted his friends to vote for the draft. He has acknowledged that German victory would force this country to retire behind an economic, political and strategic Chinese wall and to take a brutal reduction in the standard of living. Yet he has argued this was the best course. He is almost alone in facing the facts squarely and accepting the disagreeable implications of his stand, simply because the implications are so very disagreeable. And this is the best proof that the President's bill will pass in the end.

Manhattan Skipper Says Grounding Was Unavoidable

West Palm Beach, Fla., Jan. 14 (AP).—In his first public utterance since the big liner Manhattan grounded on a sandbar Sunday night, Capt. G. V. Richardson said today that "no one person is entirely to blame."

"It is what is known as 'one of those things,'" he said, adding that he was on the bridge when the ship went aground.

"We were approaching the shore and, while changing our course to go south along the coast and while the vessel was swinging, it grounded on the sandbar about one-half mile off shore."

Meanwhile, the heavy oil and water cargo was pumped out for another determined effort to float the liner.

N. J. Safety Record To Be Model for Md. Legislators

Baltimore, Jan. 14 (AP).—Efforts of W. Lee Elgin, Maryland commissioner of motor vehicles, to get legislative approval of his plan for a system of State-owned and operated inspection stations were furthered today by preparation of pamphlets contrasting Maryland's increased highway death toll with a sharp reduction shown in New Jersey.

The pamphlets, Elgin said, will be given Maryland legislators when his measure is introduced, probably within a week or ten days.

They show that in the three years since New Jersey adopted a system of State-owned and operated motor vehicle inspection stations, highway fatalities dropped by 974.

Ballet Pointes—To most of us the word "ballet" brings up a picture of girls in white tarltons dancing around on their toes. As a matter of fact, no ballerina ever speaks of "toe dancing"—it's dancing on the "pointes," and is only one of the many things she must learn. A ballet company must have dancers trained in all styles and periods of the dance and full of imagination for innovation. These members of the Washington National Ballet, who will bow to the Capital Friday at 9 p. m., when the curtain goes up on the company's presentation at the Wardman Park Theater, portray four different characters. Left to right—Alice Louise Hunter, in the role of the Village Idiot in "Melodrama;" Mary Day, in a costume of the romantic ballet; Mary Lee Smith, as "La Camargo," the famed dancer of the time of Louis XV—the beginning of the ballet as we know it today; Madeleine Lazard, in the Bohemian costume used in dances from "The Bartered Bride"

New Spring Shoes Show Native American Influence

New spring shoes place strong accent on casual styles with Indian and cowboy themes adding distinction by the use of fringes, leather-thong lacings and suede leather trimming. Pumps have rounded elasticized fronts, and one-strap walking shoes are more tailored with comfortable lowered heels. Squared toes with walled lasts are on the increase.

The girl above (left) complements her smart suit with Delman's open-toe-and-heel sandal in natural suede with radiating saddle stitching and graduated punching. Above are soft kidskin Vitality step-ins embroidered with a lasso or rope-like motif.

Props, at least one pair, have become the mainstay of every woman's shoe wardrobe. True, they may not be the most flattering shoes she owns, but no one disputes the fact that they are comfortable. Above is an I. Miller version of props that are as young and blithe looking as a ballerina's slippers. They are coolly peppered with tiny perforations and adorned with a fresh, frolicking bow

In the practical vein, most women like a walking shoe but they like them to be attractive enough to wear for dressy occasions, too. The "Porthole" oxford is gracefully cut with small side openings, a very new feeling for neat walking shoes. These are of fine-grain, genuine alligator, a most sought-after leather this season

Modern Styles In Furniture More Popular

This beginning of 1941 furniture fashion showings is most significant in the upward surge of modern style, and more of it is shown than has been for many seasons past. How Modern has changed since its last great wave of popularity! The new Modern has legs, short bases or no bases at all, and throughout it has a lighter, livlier look and so much greater variety than it ever had before. What was said to be tiring in bygone Modern has disappeared. The new has a new lightness of spirit as well as weight and color.

The particular Modern groupings introduced now offer something new in the accommodation of room sizes and wall lengths, and permit greater flexibility than ever in arrangement. So many sizes are planned in sectional pieces that any wall length can be fitted.

The Gentler Sex

Defense of Night Owls

The late riser—long the victim of the taunting tongues of bustling self-righteous "early birds"—has found a champion in Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey, founder and president of the Do Something About It League.

Mrs. DeGoofey

"I am starting a movement in defense of persons whose work or inclination causes them to breakfast at 10 instead of 7," announced the famous crusador yesterday at her press conference. "The most oppressed minority in the United States today is that of the late risers—persons such as newspaper employes, night watchmen, musicians, switchboard operators, taxi drivers, workers in night clubs, etc., who work late, and consequently must sleep late.

"These unfortunate persons are constantly subjected to ridicule and even insults from smug little people who rise at dawn and turn in with the chickens. For instance, take a person who works until midnight or later and who, after sleeping eight hours or less, arises at 9, 10 or 11 in the morning. Never to date, in history, has such a person received a telephone call—even as late as 4 o'clock in the afternoon—that the caller did not inquire in a patronizing voice: 'Did I get you out of bed?'

All Late Risers Sinful Debauchees

"Worse still, it seems impossible for an early riser to greet a late riser without pulling some hoary old joke about the latter's questionable antics the night before. In this country it is automatically assumed that anyone who goes to bed late and arises late is not exactly respectable and is probably actively living in sin. Conversely, it is assumed that the early riser is a model of virtue and industry. Even political candidates fall back on the 'I go to bed at 9 o'clock' boast to get votes.

"Personally I am very suspicious of the man or woman who invariably goes to bed at 9 o'clock. Seldom do you find that such a person ever reads a book—or even owns one. Almost never do you find such a person a stimulating talker or even an agreeable companion. He — or she — invariably gets crochety after the curfew sounds and has to be hustled off to bed like a cross child."

"But don't you think, Mrs. DeGoofey," asked a Fifty Years Ago columnist "that nature intended us to rise early? Look at the animals."

"Yes, look at them!" retorted Mrs. DeGoofey. "What is the symbol of the early riser? The rooster! Where can you find anything dumber, more swaggering, or more unaware of his own futility. On the other hand, look at the cat—the most self-sufficient and socially advanced of all animals. The cat prowls all night, as so do most of the more aggressive beasts of the jungle.

'Alone at Last' In Midnight Hour

"The whole point is," continued Mrs. DeGoofey, "that life is getting so complex and so cluttered up with people that many intelligent and selective individuals are finding it necessary to do their work at night in order to have any privacy. Many persons tell me the only time they can escape the telephone and their devouring friends is between 11 and 1 o'clock at night. And yet if they claim their honest eight hours of sleep after that, they are immediately taunted with being lazy or sinful."

"How do you plan to remedy this abuse?" asked an editorial writer.

"First, I am going to form a counter propaganda committee," was the reply. "I shall get out dodgers, posters, handbills and pamphlets combatting the dangerous and insidious propaganda that a late riser is a sinful man or woman. Second, I am going to issue buttons to all 'early birds' bearing such insignia as 'I got up at dawn' or 'Watch me crow.' By wearing these buttons the 'get up early' crowd can get it all out of their systems, satisfy their egos, and then maybe they will keep still on the subject. Finally, I am going to form a Night Owl Defense League, the members of which will not only boast long and loudly of their late hours but will reply condescendingly to all early birds' boasts of early rising with, 'So what?'

"I suppose you rise quite late yourself, Mrs. DeGoofey?" asked a gossip columnist.

"Me? No indeed! While, of course, I am distinctly in favor of late rising for others, yet I—well I have just never been the kind that would lie in bed of a morning."

Beauty Equipment Should Be Clean

Hollywood, Calif.—According to Perc Westmore, make-up director at Warner Bros., the artificial aids to beauty should be kept scrupulously clean. Make a habit of closing jars of cold cream and boxes of powder, he says, because much skin irritation results from dust falling in cosmetics. Clean hair brushes and combs by swishing them in suds with ammonia.

Brow and lash brushes may be thoroughly cleaned under a full stream of hot water from the faucet, and lip brushes should be wiped clean with a tissue after using. Wash powder puffs every few days.

Big Bust Due Mainly To Fat Deposit

Expert Says Too Large Bosom Is Not Caused by Glands

By Ida Jean Kain

ONE OF the major problems of the overweight is created by the susceptibility of the breasts to the deposit of fatty tissue. In most cases overdevelopment in this area is not due to glandular activity. It merely goes along with overweight.

The only way this measurement can be reduced is through general reduction of the weight. A protective diet restricted to two-thirds your calorie allowance will enable you to take off 1 to 2 pounds per week, with a gradual loss of weight in this measurement.

Exercise does not help to reduce the bust, but it is needed for its tonic effect on muscles and skin. The breast is a fatty gland resting on the pectoral muscle, and when the supporting muscle loses tone there is a greater tendency to sagging. The greater the excess weight in this area and the more pronounced the lack of muscle tone, the worse the measurement.

No lotions or ointments of any kind are of the slightest value in normalizing the bust. Astringents are supposed to firm a sagging contour, but what they do is tone the skin and the effect is temporary. Cold water dashed over the breasts stimulates the circulation and accomplishes the same result. The practice of splashing cold water over the breasts, chest and throat night and morning has a beneficial tonic effect.

Artificial Massage Is Harmful

No apparatus, such as a vibrator, belt or massage appliance, should ever be used on these delicate tissues.

We hear more all the time about plastic surgery for the bust. The only time plastic surgery is indicated is in cases of true deformity—which are relatively rare.

There are fairly frequent complaints that one side of the bust is larger than the other. The slight side can be built up with a bit of padding, or with a "gay deceiver," which is designed for wear inside the bra. The new uplift brassieres are certainly a boon to the feminine figure—if we had had them years ago, we wouldn't be having so much trouble now. They lift and control without binding and breaking down the tissues. In purchasing your bra, always have a fitting, just as you would for a girdle. Today there are special brassieres for every type bosom.

The overly large bust can be gradually reduced by a general reduction in weight; the skin and muscle tone can be stimulated.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl, 15, 'Has Trouble With Mother,' Who Goes Through Her Purse and Personal Papers at Night, Opens Her Mail and 'Treats Her Like a Baby'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl, 15 years old, and I have trouble with my mother over her silly arguments and punishments whenever I displease her in any way. She treats me like a baby. She doesn't seem to realize that I am 15, that I have a life of my own to live, and that I don't want her to run it for me.

I have a problem that is very disturbing and which I hope you can help me solve. Every night after I have gone to bed, mother rummages through my notebook and purse to see if I have any letters or notes she hasn't read. She leaves them in such disorder that it takes me quite a while getting things back in place again. Half the time, she takes whatever money I have. I get awfully angry and try to prevent her from getting possession of my personal affects—but she don't pay any heed to what I say.

Also, she opens my mail. This angers me most. I think that is going too far. I never come home from school to find mail that hasn't been opened. I have tried several systems of preventing this—including having my mail sent to girl friends' home—but they haven't worked so well. A few weeks ago, I saw a newspaper article written by Emily Post, which was entitled, "Hands Off Your Children's Mail." I clipped out the article and showed it to my mother, hoping she would take the hint, but she didn't.

In addition to prying into my personal effects, she embarrasses boys when they come to the house for dates. I understand the "teen age" is the best age in a girl's life. Is this true? If so, why doesn't my mother let me get some enjoyment out of life? Why doesn't she trust me and believe in me? Please give me a system for keeping my personal belongings out of my mother's hands. I hate to talk about her like this, but I can't stand the situation much longer. I shall appreciate any advice.

UNHAPPY DAUGHTER.

Case of Pot Calling Kettle Black

DEAR UNHAPPY: Judging from the pert, self-assured tone of your letter, this seems to be a case of the pot calling the kettle black. I get the impression that you must be quite a thorn-in-the-side of your well meaning but wretchedly mismanaging mother. Your opening statement that you "have trouble with her, over her silly arguments and punishments whenever you displease her—" isn't calculated to prejudice one in your favor.

While each individual does, indeed, "have a life to live"—a girl of 15 is by no means ready to "run her own life," without some parental guidance and supervision. It is your misfortune, as well as your mother's that hostility (on your part), and suspicion (on hers), have taken the place of what should be harmonious understanding and affectionate mutual confidence,—which would enable her to exercise her guardian's function without stooping to pry.

From the viewpoint of good manners and ethical dealing, there is virtually no defense one can make, of your mother's habit of opening your mail, rummaging through your personal papers, taking money from your purse, etc. Gentlefolk simply don't do such things. But it is obvious, on the other hand, that her unbecoming practices stem from a worried concern over your excessive, and seemingly secretive, social activities.

The truth of the matter is, I suppose, that you are "boy crazy"—and up to your ears in correspondence by mail and by hand (behind teacher's back), either with boys, or with girls in pursuit of the subject of boys. It is unfortunate, I repeat, that you and your mother are such "bad friends" that you can't "get together," as the saying goes, on the cooperative proposition of managing your affairs with greatest social profit to yourself.

You aren't helping matters by treating her arguments and disciplines as "silly," when she cracks down, after you have displeased her. And if she is resorting to underhanded tactics in an effort to "keep a line" on your conduct, we must assume that you are largely responsible for that sordid state of affairs. You ask, "Why doesn't she trust me and believe in me?" Well, why does anyone distrust or disbelieve another? Usually, for the reason that he has been given sound cause to take a skeptical attitude.

You may be sure that if you were an absolutely trustworthy daughter—sensible, punctual wholly truthful, well behaved, invariably open and aboveboard in your actions—your mother would be proud and happy to let you manage your own affairs; and it would be her triumphant boast, among her friends, that her daughter never had given her a moment's worry.

Since things have come to such a sorry pass in your household—so that you haven't a moment's peace from surveillance; and can't think of any successful method of keeping your intimate affairs a secret from your mother—I suggest that you turn over a new leaf and so live that it doesn't matter how much she knows about what you are doing. Your behavior, in having your mail sent to friends' homes—in order to keep it out of your mother's hands—has been cheaply disloyal and undignified, and must have cost you something, in loss of regard, both in their eyes and in their parents' eyes.

As for the "teen age being best age in a girl's life,"—that is just a lot of bosh. The teen-age is a terrific strain on every sensible person concerned—on youngsters and adults alike. Most really interesting mature persons, when looking back on their teens, will tell you that the so-called "period of adolescence" is the sorriest phase of existence.

If you would disarm your mother's suspicions and earn the right to some freedom of action, adapt with grace and courtesy to her nervous supervision. Try to cultivate her friendship and understanding, by inviting long talks with her, about life and how to live it. See if you can discover and help her, honestly, to dismiss those fears for your welfare that are causing her to behave in a killjoy manner. In so doing, you will be using your teen years to profit. In failing to do so, under the circumstances, you will be cultivating a reckless, rude, defiant personality that will be a handicap all through life.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

To Party Level

Here is a tip that steps leftover food up to a party class: Put some chopped cooked ham in cheese sauce and serve over hot, seasoned broccoli. It makes a fitting luncheon dish and can be accompanied by a generous green or fruit salad, hot bread and light pastry dessert.

White Linen Damask Smart

Once again white is the most fashionable color you can put on your dining room table when its set for formal meals. Of course those lovely colored Irish linen damasks are still smart but the decorators and the women who set the loveliest tables are again showing a decided preference for pure white. And after all white does make the best background for a colorful flower or fruit centerpiece or for richly toned china.

Julius Amberg, Wife En Route to Capital

New Assistant to Secretary Stimson Expected to Arrive Today or Tomorrow; Luncheons Take Over Social Calendar

By Hope Ridings Miller

ON THEIR WAY to Washington are Mr. and Mrs. Julius Amberg, who left their home in Grand Rapids by motor yesterday and are expected here either today or tomorrow. Mr. Amberg, the newly appointed special assistant to Secretary of War Stimson, is well known in Washington, is a former high school classmate of Senator Arthur Vandenberg, and is also an old friend of Justice Felix Frankfurter.

Hope Ridings Miller

One of Michigan's top-notch lawyers, Mr. Amberg is a partner of Roger Butterfield and has visited here frequently. A friend notified me by telegram from Grand Rapids that both Mr. Amberg and his wife are among the town's most popular citizens, and that their many friends were loathe to bid them good-by.

Apparently Mr. Amberg was not so reluctant to leave, however; for my spy informs me that he was so excited when notified of his appointment that he took a shower with his garters on!

Accompanying the Ambergs to Washington is their 16-year-old daughter, Hazel, who will finish the year at some local school. Their son is studying at Princeton. The newcomers will be at the Wardman Park Hotel temporarily, but they hope to take a house later.

LADIES' LUNCHEONS took over the social calendar yesterday when a record number of Capital hostesses were out and about at mid-day fetes. Mrs. Roosevelt was guest of honor at a luncheon for 12 given by Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, wife of the Attorney General. The party initiated an annual series at which wives of Cabinet officials entertain the First Lady. The second will go on the boards today with Mrs. Frank Knox as hostess.

Largest on yesterday's list of luncheons was the one given by Mrs. Edward Burke at the Congressional Club. In the nature of a farewell party, the event marked the last social function at which Mrs. Burke appeared as president of the club. Following a business meeting today, she will be succeeded by Mrs. John Taber, wife of Representative Taber, of New York. The 40 guests were seated at a U-shaped table, which was decorated with bouquets of jonquils and acacia. Included in the company were current officers of the club and those who will be elected today. In the group were Mrs. Morris Sheppard, Mrs. Charles Plumley, Mrs. Dow Harter, Mrs. Herron Pearson, Mrs. Homer Angell, Mrs. John Sparkman, Mrs. Harry Coffee and Mrs. Charles Clason. Also among the guests was Mrs. Otis Bland, chairman of the nominating committee.

Still another luncheon on yesterday's calendar was the one given by Mrs. Thurman Arnold, wife of the Assistant Attorney General, who feted her sister, Mrs. Royall Hauer, of New Rochelle, N. Y. The latter will leave today for San Francisco. Other out-of-town guests included Mrs. Ralph Greenlee, of New York and Chicago, who is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Detmar Finke, in Georgetown.

With Justice and Mrs. William O. Douglas, Mr. and Mrs. Arnold will entertain at a dinner Saturday evening for Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Smith, the former of whom will leave early next month for London.

HERE AND THERE: Being widely feted on his Middle Western trip is the Netherlands Minister, Alexander Loudon, who has made a record number of successful speeches before financial and industrial leaders in Chicago and other cities the last few days. He is now in Detroit, where he will be entertained by Henry Ford and several other prominent persons. The envoy will return to Washington the end of this week . . . Mrs. Arthur H. Vandenberg will leave today for New York, where she will visit Mr. and Mrs. Edward Pfeiffer for several days. Senator Vandenberg will join her there over the week-end . . . . Mrs. Robert H. Jackson will go to Newport News, Va., January 31 to christen the new ship, President Adams, of the Presidents Line. Her maid of honor will be her daughter, Mary Margaret Jackson, a student at Smith College, and the matron of honor will be Mrs. Richard Patterson, of Locust Valley, Long Island, wife of the former Assistant Secretary of Commerce.

SOCIETY-GO-ROUND: The Assistant Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Oscar Littleton Chapman have cards out for a reception on Inauguration Day. The party is scheduled from 4:30 to 7 o'clock at the Kennedy-Warren . . . The Governor of Maine and Mrs. Sumner Sewall will be guests of honor at a tea to be given by Representative Margaret Smith on Sunday. Gov. and Mrs. Sewall, who will arrive here Saturday, will be guests of honor at a dinner to be given by Senator and Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster at the Sulgrave Club on Inauguration night . . . Homer Cummings has issued invitations to a buffet supper on Saturday evening in honor of the Governor of Connecticut and Mrs. Hurley. Guests will gather at "Ruthven," the Cummings home at 2700 Tilden Street, from 10 to 12 p. m.

Lucile Sheppard's Engagement To A. H. Keyes, Jr., Announced

MISS LUCILE SHEPPARD

Daughter of Senator and Mrs. Sheppard Expects to Be Wed in Spring; Now Working For Her M. A. Degree at Radcliffe College

Senator and Mrs. Morris Sheppard announce the engagement of their daughter, Lucile, to Arthur H. Keyes, jr., son of Arthur Keyes, of Rutland, Vt., and the late Mrs. Keyes.

The bride-elect, one of the most popular of the Senate daughters, was graduated with honors from Wellesley College last year. She is now working for her M. A. degree at Radcliffe College. She also was graduated from Gunston Hall here and before that she studied at Western High School. She made her debut at a dinner at the Mayflower several seasons ago.

The Sheppard family is as well known in Washington as many "native sons and daughters." Senator Sheppard first came to Congress in 1902, serving as a Representative until 1912, when he was elected to the Senate. He and his wife, the former Lucile Sanderson, of Texarkana, Tex., have been in Washington through each Congressional session since their marriage in 1909. They also have a home in Texarkana and spend most of their summers there.

Mr. Keyes was graduated from Deerfield Academy in 1935 and from Princeton University in 1939. He is now attending graduate School of Architecture at Harvard University.

Miss Sheppard and her fiance visited Senator and Mrs. Sheppard during the Christmas holidays. They plan to be married in the spring.

Capital Whirl

By Sally Swift

The popular diplomat is on his way to his new post as French Ambassador to Brazil, but will linger in Washington until Saturday. THE British Charge d'Affaires and Mrs. Nevile Butler gave an informal dinner party the other evening in honor of Sir Hugh Dowding who, as head of the Fighter Command of the Royal Air Force, has been a key man in the defense of Britain. Sir Hugh is in the United States for the purpose of sharing his firsthand knowledge of aerial warfare with American aviation technicians. One feels immediately that he is a very dependable person to have around, equal to any emergency, even a small one. When the gentlemen arrived in the drawing room after their talk over the coffee, Sir Hugh went directly to Mrs. Butler and said with determination, "I'm awfully sorry, but I spilt some coffee on a sofa cushion. I immediately wiped off the spot and turned the cushion over so it doesn't show at all."

Also dining with the Butlers were Admiral Arthur Peters and Mrs. Peters who are on their way back to England from the admiral's recent post at Hong Kong. The Peters have crossed the continent, taking in the Grand Canyon and all the sights en route, and with devout thanks for the good weather encountered everywhere.

Also present were Gen. and Mrs. Sherman Miles, he is chief of Army Intelligence, and Dr. Edward P. Warner, of the Civil Aeronautics Board, and Mrs. Warner.

MRS. George Rublee's recent luncheon for Mrs. Thomas Hepburn was small enough to give the guests an opportunity really to know the fascinating mother of the well-known actress. The Rublees' house, set high on a hill above Rock Creek Park, was flooded with sunlight and the luncheon table was bright with old-fashioned pink roses. Mrs. Hepburn was very smart in black, while Mrs. Keith Merrill wore a becoming gray dress and matching hat. Other ladies present were Mrs. Eliot Wadsworth, Mrs. Edward Burling, Mrs. Lucius Wilmerding, Mrs. Montgomery Blair and Mrs. Donald Richberg.

Later in the day Mrs. John Davidge entertained at a cocktail party in honor of Mrs. Hepburn.

MR. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse have returned to Washington from a trip to New York where they attended the opera and where Mrs. Shouse did some work on her pet project, the Institute for Research on Women's Professional Relations. This long title merely means that the institute helps women to find out what jobs are open to them and advises them on how to equip themselves for such jobs. Mrs. Shouse is particularly interested at the moment in the jobs to be had in the industries which clothe the American woman. A dress show will be held in New York in Easter Week with special emphasis on design, an art which flourished in Paris before the war, but which now is largely transplanted to the United States.

The association's other offerings will be an Opera Trio from New York, and the Littlefield Ballet.

Philadelphia Orchestra Heard by Enthusiastic Society Audience

The Philadelphia Orchestra waits for no one—not even the First Lady. Led by Eugene Ormandy, the orchestra was well on its way through a Haydn symphon when the White House limousine drew up the ramp. However, Mrs. Roosevelt was whisked unobstrusively into her box during a convenient pause in the music. She wore a squirrel cape over her black dinner frock which had reveres of silver embroidery.

It was an enthused audience—a rather casual mingling of sable wraps and camel's hair sport coats—that heard the concert, as well as Miss Helen Jepson, famed soprano, who was guest artist. Radiant in a white crepe gown, with a billowing skirt that had rows of ostrich feathers, blond Miss Jepson "brought down the house."

Miss Boardman Attends Concert

Completely absorbed in the music were the Soviet Ambassador and Mme. Oumansky. She wore a soft squirrel coat over her frock. Not far away, in her usual box, was Miss Mabel Boardman, in mink. The tall, rather grave Belgian Ambassador, Count Robert van der Straten Ponthoz, registered amusement during the playing of "Eight Etutes for Symphony Orchestra," a composition by Robert Russell Bennett.

In street dress were the Charge d'Affaires of Germany and Frau Thomsen. She wore an elegant mink coat over her frock and an off-the-face bonnet was edged in mink. Arriving together were Mr. and Mrs. Harry Grant Meem and Mrs. Emil Hurja, whose short silver fox jacket was over her bright gown. Miss Nell Dowling wore a purple wool cape with a band of gold kid at the neckline, over her black dinner frock.

Mrs. Woodward In Audience

Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Graham were accompanied by Edwin Hudleston, Miss Phyllis Asher and Richard De Muth. A fluffy lynx jacket topped the bright red velvet frock worn by Miss Mary Wright. Still others were Mrs. F. A. Keep, Mrs. Stanley Woodward, Mrs. Ord Preston, Mrs. Ralph Worthington and Mrs. Bruce Smith.

Miss Julie Targarona was accompanied by Dennis Pickens. She wore a long, white caracul coat over her frock. Mrs. Morris Cafritz wore a gold and black striped lame gown. Still others there were Mrs. George Briggs, Miss Nancy Weller, Dr. Don Brewster, Miss Jean Dinsmore, Mrs. Foster Adams, Mrs. Edward R. Finkenstaedt, Lieut. Robert S. Hatcher, Mrs. George A. Gordon and many others.

About the Town

with Dudley Harmon

THAT indispensable feature of the Capital scene, a news photographer, set down his camera for a moment and began to talk. Between snaps at a Townsend musicale, he opined that:

DUDLEY HARMON

Young people are more agreeable about posing than older ones . . . but in Washington everybody's pretty obliging, especially those in official life . . . But less so than in New York cafe society, where members practically trample on one another to get before the lens . . . In Washington, Mrs. D. Worth Clark and Mrs. Claude Pepper are among the photographer's favorites, because they are so very cooperative.

Senator Glass and Justice McReynolds used to object to being snapped, but with the years have mellowed in this respect. The Ecuadorean Ambassador, the Dominican Minister and the Scandinavian envoys are among the most obliging of the diplomats . . . Getting inside the British Embassy to take pictures has always presented difficulties . . . Miss Frances Perkins objects to being photographed in profile . . . Most photogenic of the season's debutantes is Louise Stillwell . . . Of all people in public life, President Roosevelt is the favorite of cameramen, because "he's the most prominent and has the least inhibitions about having his picture taken."

SPEAK GENTLY to a photographer who has just snapped a picture you don't want used. Like as not he'll be obliging and give you the negative. But if you yell at him, or throws things (and this sometimes happens) he's pretty sure to yell and throw right back at you—and keep the print.

AS chairman of the President's Birthday Horse Show, Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert has so many responsibilities that she refuses to leave town even for a day. One of her problems concerns a delicate horse belonging to an exhibitor. The latter insists that the animal must have a certain special brand of oats. Evie's job is not only to round up the oats and see they get to Fort Myer, but also "see that the bill is rendered accordingly."

Though she looks much too pretty to be efficient, Mrs. Robert is that rare person, a really capable volunteer worker. When she says she'll do something, she delivers.

LIFE in Europe seems to have gone back to medieval days this grim winter. A friend received a letter from a relative in an occupied country which tells of going out shooting—not Germans, but a bird for the family dinner. Evidently the citizens of that country are still allowed to keep firearms—probably because a rifle isn't much use against a tank.

• • • •

ODDS AND ENDS: Sir Hugh Dowding, Britain's former air chief, took time out the other morning for a little skating when the ice club met. He cut some complicated figures . . . Good news from New York says the Canadian Minister and Mrs. Loring Christie should be back here by the end of the month. As a farewell gift to the retiring Polish Ambassador, Count Potocki, members of his staff gave him a handsome brief case with his name engraved on a silver placque.

Many Parties Being Planned For Gradys

Retiring Assistant Secretary of State, Wife To Go to West Coast

Farewell parties by the dozens are swirling around popular Mrs. Henry F. Grady, who will leave for San Francisco early next month. Her husband, who today will formally retire as Assistant Secretary of State to become president of the American President Steamship Lines, will also be widely feted as soon as he returns from the West Coast.

Mr. Grady will be back in time for the inauguration, and shortly after that partying for both him and his wife will begin in earnest. To mention but a few of the fetes planned either for one or both—there is the luncheon that Mrs. E. G. Nourse will give today for Mrs. Grady. On January 24, a group of New York and Washington trade executives will give a cocktail party for Mr. Grady, and on January 26, he and Mrs. Grady will be feted at a supper given by Dr. and Mrs. Tomas Cajigas.

Other parties on the Grady calendar include the luncheon Mrs. Robert Carr has planned for January 28 (that's for Mrs. Grady); a tea that same day, at which Justice and Mrs. Justin Miller will be hosts; and a similar party on January 29, to be given by Rear Admiral and Mrs. Harold Bowen.

Mrs. Grady will attend a dinner to be given by the League of Women Voters on January 30, and that evening she and Mr. Grady will dine with Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wyatt.

The next night Justice and Mrs. William O. Douglas will entertain them at dinner and on February 1 Dr. and Mrs. Stanley K. Hornbeck will give a tea in their honor.

Sulgrave Club To Open New Mexican Bar

The Sulgrave Club is having a social face-lifting tomorrow afternoon from 4 to 7 when its board of governors will receive at an affair which will celebrate the opening of the club's new Mexican Patio Bar.

General Federation of Women's Clubs Board Opens Midwinter Convention in Washington Today

Leaders Greet Members of Congress At Reception

Saidie Orr Dunbar, President, Heads Receiving Line

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

The mid-winter meeting of the board of the General Federation of Women's Clubs will convene this morning in the East Room of the Mayflower Hotel. The business sessions, which will continue through Friday, were preceded by the reception given by Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar and members of the board last night in the Mayflower ballroom.

Club leaders from every State greeted members of the Congressional delegations and other officials from their home States, at the affair which was attended by nearly 1,000 members and guests.

Mrs. Dunbar, whose home is in Portland, Oreg., and who is completing the third year of her administration as president of the General Federation, headed the officers in the receiving line. She wore a gown of deep blue lace and a corsage of white orchids. With her were Mrs. John L. Whitehurst, of Baltimore, first vice president, wearing aquamarine lace and marganza; Mrs. LaFell Dickinson, of Keene, N. H., in black brocaded satin; Mrs. Horace B. Ritchie, of Athens, Ga., recording secretary, in light blue chiffon, embroidered in coral sequins; Mrs. J. L. Blair Buck, of Richmond, treasurer, in seafoam chiffon; Mrs. Rowland H. Largest Reception Of Administration

Every year of Mrs. Dunbar's administration, the reception has been more largely attended than the year before. Last night's affair was the climax. Seldom has there been a larger gathering of more distinguished club women in the Capital.

The official guests attending were headed by Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins. Others there were Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, of the Social Security Board, Senator and Mrs. Alexander Wiley, of Wisconsin, Senator and Mrs. Ralph O. Among prominent officers was Mrs. Frederic Beggs, of Wyckoff, N. J., who led the Good Neighbor Tour of Federation officers to South America last summer. She wore a becoming gown of aquamarine crepe and found herself answering many questions about club programs on Western Hemisphere solidarity.

Another of the department chairmen was Dr. Josephine L. Peirce, of Lima, Ohio, chairman of the Department of American Home, under which the important consumer program of the federation comes. Dr. Peirce wore a dress of lavender crepe with a pansy design.

Among others were Mrs. Gustav Ketterer, of Philadelphia, chairman of the department of legislation, wearing white chiffon with a red velvet jacket; Mrs. C. W. Hunter, of Wellington, Kans., in blue chiffon; Mrs. F. F. Bossout, of Harvre, Mont., in a figured blue and rose crepe with a Chinese shawl; Mrs. Clarence G. Goodwin, of Chicago, in royal blue chiffon with a lace jacket, and Mrs. H. J. Wilson, of Hazelhurst, Miss., in mauve lace and marquisette, all trustees.

The trustees alternated in presiding at the supper table, as did the departmental chairmen. Amng these were also Mrs. Carl L. Schrader, of Boston, chairman of fine arts, who wore gray chiffon; Mrs. Fred R. Lufkin, of Elgin, Ill., chairmen of press and publicity, who was in a gown of black lace.

Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, president of the District federation, was among the guests, wearing a white gown embroidered in gold. Mrs. Lloyd Biddle, past president of the District and director to the general federation, wore black velvet with the bodice embroidered in silver.

Business of the federation board will open today at 9:15 with the ratification of new directors. Mrs. Dunbar, Mrs. Whitehurst and Mrs. Dickinson will preside at the morning session and reports of officers will be given.

This afternoon at 4 o'clock Mrs. Roosevelt will receive the board members at the White House.

Tonight, Dr. Harriet Elliott, consumer member of the National Defense Advisory Commission, will head the list of speakers on a program devoted to "Consumer Defense." "Ask the Experts" is the title of the forum following.

The experts will be: H. W. Brightman, chairman of the National Consumer Retailer Council, of which the federation is a member; Dr. John Cassels, formerly director of the Institute for Consumers Education at Stephens College; Mrs. Minnie Fisher Cunningham, Miss Loda Mae Davis, Dr. Caroline F. Madame Chairman

By Suzanne

MRS. JOHN EDWARD JOHNTZ, of Abilene, Kans., who is here for the midwinter session of the board of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, is a grandmother and proud of it.

All grandmothers are proud of their grandchildren. Mrs. Johntz believes, but not so many are pleased with the idea of being called "grandma." There are many who invent quaint little names by which to be called, instead, but Mrs. Johntz is not among them. She has four grandchildren, three boys and a girl, and there is no word in the English language that sounds sweeter to her than "grandmother," when one of those youngsters says it, she declares.

Mrs. Johntz, who is chairman of credentials, badges and elections, has not attended other board meetings during Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar's administration as president of the General Federation, but is here for this one as the triennial convention in Atlantic City next June will bring her duties of office to the fore. It is one of the chairmanships which calls for action only once in three years.

Mrs. Johntz, who is one of the leading club women of her State and a past president of the Kansas State Federation, is following in her mother's footsteps in her leadership in club activities. Her mother, the late Mrs. Catherine America Hoffman, also held General Federation chairmanships on various occasions and was one of Kansas' foremost women.

Mrs. Johntz is president of the Women's Kansas Day Club and is planning the program for the annual meeting to be held January 29, in Topeka.

She came to Washington with Mrs. C. W. Hunter, of Wellington, another prominent Kansas club woman, who is a member of the board of trustees.

Among Texas women here for the meeting are Mrs. J. W. Walker, of Plainview, new president of the Texas Federation; Mrs. Joseph Perkins, of Eastland, new director to the General Federation from that State; Mrs. Grace F. Vance, of Refugio, first vice president, and Miss Ethel Foster, of Sterling City, treasurer.

Among those from New Jersey are Mrs. Patrick H. Adams, of Maplewood, the State president, and Mrs. Harland A. Pratt, of Plainfield, who has the important job of managing the Atlantic City convention as local convention chairman.

CITIZENSHIP WORK—Mrs. Frederick H. Clausen, of Horicon, Wis., chairman of American citizenship for the federation, who is also here, is urging club women throughout the country to make personal contact with recently naturalized citizens and to instill in the man appreciation of American life and ideals.

She cited the work of federation members in cooperation with those of other groups in Milwaukee, where they teach in vocational schools, teach in English language and literature classes and work in recreation centers with the foreign born.

"It requires individual effort," she said, "and is one place women can fill in preparedness."

NEW CLUB—The women of the Rosemont section of Alexandria have formed an organization to be known as the Rosemont Civic Club, dedicated to the cause of civic improvements and "obtaining for Rosemont residents just recognition as property owners and to constantly bring before the attention of its representatives in the council—city and State—of the need of just and equitable representation."

League Plans Benefits for Hungry Finns

Meager Fare That Is Finland's Best Will Be Served

A menu such as constitutes the "best meal" in Finland today, will be served at luncheons to be sponsored all over the country in observance of Kalevala Day, February 28, by the American League for Finnish War Orphans. Initial plans for the Nation-wide observance were discussed yesterday by the board of of the league at a meeting held at the home of Mrs. Emile Hurja, 2419 California Street.

The league, formed early in June, has already cabled $34,000 to Finland to aid the children orphaned by the war. In addition, several thousands dollars is being contributed monthly from persons all over the United States, who have "adopted" Finnish orphans, pledging regular support of from $25 to $250 a year. The entire proceeds of the luncheons will be cabled to Finland as soon as they are held, said Mrs. Hurja and the place where the Washington one will be held is soon to be announced.

The "best meal" which the luncheon guests will eat without complaint, follows: Oatmeal boiled in water and served without milk or sugar but with unsweetened berry sauce, probably cranberry, which is most plentiful in Finland; boiled codfish without butter; boiled potatoes, hardtack made from rye flour, a cereal substitute for coffee, without milk or sugar. The children in Finland are rationed one glass of milk a day in addition to such a meal as this.

"Finland faces not only hunger but famine by spring unless prompt aid is given," Mrs. Hurja declared.

Serving with her as officers are Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, Mrs. George Pettengill, Mrs. William Prescott, Mme. Erkki Mikkola, Mme. Hjalmar Procope, wife of the Finnish Minister; Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss and Mrs. Edwin T. Meredith. Miss Eleanor Elm is secretary at the headquarters, 2020 Massachuetts Avenue.

Curran Praises Work of D.A.R.

Judge Edward M. Curran, U. S. district attorney for the District of Columbia, commended the Daughters of the American Revolution for their work in sponsoring Junior American Citizens' clubs last night in an address at the annual dinner of Louisa Adams Chapter of the District D. A. R. at Hotel 2400.

These clubs "are of vital importance to the youth of the Nation," declared Judge Curran, who said he was familiar with their work through his observation of that in the District.

Mrs. Paul Eichhorn, who, with Mrs. Craig L. Reddish, assisted Mrs. Brinkley E. Callicott in arranging last night's dinner, is chapter chairman of the Junior American Citizens clubs committee. Judge Curran urged the women to continue their work in this field and stressed the fact that individual effort was necessary in order to instill in youth the ideals that have made America.

"The progress and achievement of a nation are measured by the education and opportunity afforded its youth," he said.

"We have come far in a short time in the juvenile court movement," Judge Curran observed. "What was regarded at the turn of century as a scheme for pampering wayward boys and girls has ripened into an almost universally proclaimed method of dealing with a preplexing national problem."

Music on the program, at which Mrs. Frank E. Hickey, the regent, presided, was provided by Walter Bohan, violinist, accompanied by Albert B. Llufrio, radio and concert pianist.

Knudsen to See Governors On Defense

Inaugural Committee To Regulate Prices, Quality of Food

The defense program entered the realm of inaugural activities yesterday when it was revealed William S. Knudsen has invited Governors coming to Washington for the inauguration to a dinner Sunday at 8 p. m. in the Carlton Hotel.

O. Max Gardner, former Governor of North Carolina, serving as chairman of the Governors' reception committee, said Knudsen will discuss problems of national defense as it affects the States represented.

Meanwhile, reports that taxicab companies planned to petition the Public Utilities Commission for a boost in rates on Inauguration Day and that concession operators planned to charge "fabulous" prices for hot dogs and sandwiches were squelched by authorities.

Thirty Governors Accept

Knudsen, as director of the Office of Production Management, it was said, has a splendid opportunity to promote national defense and national unity. Gardner and Joseph E. Davies, chairman of the Inaugural Committee, said they did not think "sufficient stress" has been attached to the gathering of Governors here.

Thirty Governors already have accepted invitations to attend the inauguration, and the number is expected to reach 36 with others sending special representatives.

Reports that taxicab representatives would petition the P. U. C. for permission to operate Monday on an hourly basis in place of the zone system did not materialize yesterday. Riley Elgen, chairman of the commission, said he had heard that several groups were considering such a petition, but that none had been received. He said any change in the rate system would require a public hearing.

Hot Dogs a Dime

Welcome news for parade watchers came yesterday from Alfons B. Landa, executive assistant to Chairman Davies, on the sale of soft drinks, hot dogs, sandwiches, cigarettes and souvenirs. Although only one firm thus far has been given a license to sell refreshments, Landa said others may still receive the license if they comply with regulations. These regulations concern sanitation, price to the public and turning over 20 per cent of the gross receipts to the Inaugural Committee.

Under the plan of the committee, the public will be protected against "exorbitant" prices and unwholesome food. The price scale must be approved by the committee and prices posted for each item. Cigarettes will sell for 15 cents, ham and cheese sandwich for 15 cents, soft drinks for 10 cents, peanuts and candy, 5 cents, and hot dogs, 10 cents.

Seats are still available, but officials advised early purchase. Melvin C. Hildreth said last night every seat in stand No. 10, Pensylvania Avenue, between Fourteenth and Fifteenth Streets, Northwest, had been sold. By the end of the week, the committee expects to sell the last available seat.

Makes It Easier For Kitchen Police

This announcement came yesterday from the War Department:

"A single simple change in the G. I. (galvanized iron) cans, brought about by need for utilization of every bit of space by the rapidly expanding Army, has made a saving of about 75 per cent of much valuable storage space.

"Familiar objects around any Army camp or post, the G. I. cans have been made smaller at the bottom than at the top, so that now they may be nested, permitting piles as high as the ceiling if necessary. The cans, which are used for washing mess kits, storing potatoes, vegetables, collection of garbage, and a score of equally varied uses, are made in four sizes—32, 24, 16 and 10 gallons. A set of four cans now can be stored in the space previously used by one 32-gallon can."

TRY THE VINEGAR NEXT TIME, SON

Kindergarten pupils at the Keene School, on Riggs Road, are learning the fundamentals of economics by playing "grocery store." Empty cans and cartons are stock in trade. The system almost had an unpleasant effect in one home when the young merchant there sought to pour out Daddy's Scotch so he could take the empty bottle to school.

WELL, THE DRILL FIELDS ARE FLAT

Clarksburg, W. Va., Jan. 14 (AP).—Army life probably won't seem half so strange to Burley Turner as the "big city" was. Turner, 32-year-old draftee from the Pendleton County mountains, making his "first trip off the farm" to report for induction, had never seen a streetcar, a train, or an elevator. So he walked up six flights to his room.

Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

It's entirely possible that the Overman Act will be revived shortly. The measure, which is being studied by top Administration officials, was passed on May 20, 1918. It gave President Wilson vast powers over executive departments, including authority to create new agencies as well as to consolidate bureaus. There were no exemptions in the bill. It has been suggested that the President could establish an agency to handle the "lend-lease" bill by his own order if he were given authority that Wilson enjoyed under the Overman Act. Several officials close to the President are known to feel that such authority is imperative if the President is to meet the emergency effectively.

President Wilson created the potent War Industries Board under the Overman Act. That board handled production, aid to the Allies and other phases of defense during the World War period. The Overman Act was strictly a war measure. It expired six months after the war and all the agencies were supposed to revert to their former status. However, some of the shifts made are still in effect. For example, the Army Air Corps was made a separate unit. It was divorced from the Signal Corps. Another order made the Justice Department the legal arm of the Government. The Overman Act was bitterly contested. President Wilson was accused of desiring to be a "dictator."

Several hours after "Shay" Minton had been appointed an administrative assistant to the President he ordered Nelson Rockefeller to move from his spacious office in the State Department Building. Rockefeller's office had been reserved for a Presidential assistant. That is one of the many incidents in the fight for adequate Federal office space. All of which makes the life of C. J. Guthridge, space control chief, very miserable.

Latest information is that the Government will take over the new Longfellow Building at Connecticut and Rhode Island Avenues. The plan is to move RFA, scattered in nine different buildings, into the structure that will be completed within three weeks. Remaining space would be turned over to Farm Security. The old Bureau of Fisheries is to be moved from the Commerce Building to the second and third floors of the old Potomac Park Apartments.

National Defense Commission has its personnel scattered in 11 different buildings. It was planned to put them together in the new Social Security Building, but that was before the new Office of Production Management was started. Now it is believed OPM and the Priorities Board will need most of the available space at the Security Building. Other expanding Federal agencies that are crying for additional space are NYA, Bureau of Mines, Geological Survey, Indian Bureau, and Social Security.

Charles Palmer, defense housing coordinator, has a new publicity expert. He is Davis Snow, formerly of FHA . . . Radio broadcasters are looking for an influential New Dealer to be a Washington lobbyist . . . It has been generally overlooked, but nondefense construction activities of Public Buildings Administration and USHA have been drastically curtailed by the President. Both agencies are confining their talents almost exclusively to defense housing projects, which are lagging behind schedule. The President has forbidden them to start projects that can't be tied in with national defense.

Rex Tugwell is being given to the public in small doses. The President is understood to be desirous of having Tugwell back in a key Federal job. Rex is said to be willing. But Tugwell has been held up as the symbol of a meddling "brain truster" and the public confidence in him isn't what it might be. His appointment yesterday as special adviser to Interior Secretary Harold Ickes to study the "500-acre" law in Puerto Rico is merely a device for sliding him back into the public service. It's highly significant that Rex was placed in Interior. One of the jobs Rex is being boomed for is chief of the Forest Service and Ickes will be mighty unhappy if he doesn't get that agency in the next reorganization bill.

D. C. Courts Draw Fire Of Lawyers

300 District Bar Members Debate Problems Facing Organization

Amid violent debate in which shortcomings were frequently laid to the courts of the District, nearly 300 members of the District Bar Association last night dealt with grave problems of their organization, at the regular monthly meeting at the Mayflower.

Chief among the proceedings were these:

Despite warning that the association library may be put out of its rent-free quarters at the courthouse by the end of the month, the association again refused to let non-members use the books.

Membership of women lawyers on the same terms as men was recommended by the committee on the subject.

The lawyers demanded that the new District courthouse be located in Judiciary Square and not on Capitol Hill, as the justice desire.

Judges Draw Criticism

Judges of the United States Court of Appeals here were criticized for taking three months vacation a year when their docket is months behind.

All votes at the meeting were by "ayes" and "nays," without a tally.

The bar association's 25,000-volume library, valued at $100,000 has occupied 3,200 square feet of room in the crowded District courthouse for many years without payment of rent. Its use is limited to the association's 1,323 members, 65 associate members and to the judges. Law suits repeatedly have been brought to challenge the right of the association to use public space for a private library. One is now pending in the District Court and another in the United States Court of Appeals here.

Ejection Near, He Warns

William E. Richardson, chairman of the bar's committee on extension of library privileges, review the lawsuits and pointed out that last month the association rejected a compromise proposal for use of the books by nonmembers who paid a fee. The Court of Appeals suit would have been dropped if the compromise had been accepted, he said.

As the situation stands now, Richardson declared, the library probably would be ejected by the end of the month, because Department of Justice officials feel loath to go to the Court of Appeals to defend the association's right to operate a private library in the courthouse. Francis W. Hill, Jr., president, echoed this warning.

Richard E. Welman asked unanimous consent to reopen the compromise for acceptance last night, but was blocked by the objection of Thomas Rhodes.

Committee Discharged

Richardson's request that his committee be discharged because it could do no more in arranging extension of privileges was granted by vote of the meeting.

Later, Treasurer Milton W. King reported that it would cost $4,000 to move the library to other quarters, but said his committee had found no other quarters. King said a survey showed only enght-tenths of 1 per cent of vacancy in Washington office buildings. King said that rent for library quarters would add $10,000 a year to the bar's present $16,000 annual expenses, which just about equal present receipts.

Admission of Women Urged

Edwin C. Dutton, chairman, recommended for the committee on relations with the Women's Bar Association that Washington women lawyers be admitted to the District Bar Association on equal terms with men. Dutton said Mrs. Elizabeth M. Cox, W. B. A. president, advised him that every State bar association and every city bar association in America, except those in Washington and Baltimore, admitted women. His proposal will be voted on next month.

There are 275 members of the W. B. A., 50 of them in active practice.

The meeting roared approval of the demand of William A. Roberts, chairman of the committee on the proposed new District courthouse, that the new building be on Judiciary Square instead of on Capitol Hill. Roberts blamed "illusions of grandeur" for proposals that a building near the Supreme Court to house the District Court and the Court of Appeals. Thomas S. Settle, secretary of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, told the meeting that his group favored the Judiciary Square location. Henry I. Quinn criticized justices of the two courts for advocating the Supreme Court site without consulting the association.

The association approved a proposal of Harlan Wood, chairman of the committee on Municipal Court, that appeals be a matter of right in all cases involving more than $300.

To objections that this would hamper the Court of Appeals, where there is a year's lag between filing of an appeal and its argument, with a further delay before the decision is announced, Richard E. Merrick retorted that the appeals judges "work only nine months a year."

"Let them work for 11 months a year," Merrick urged, "and hear appeals in that air-conditioned courtroom until their docket is up to date." Numerous members voiced agreement.

Transfer Puts 'Mr. Secretary' In Hospital

Voluntary Valet For Agriculture Chiefs Held Shift a Demotion

Edward David Crockett, 52-year-old colored messenger and voluntary valet for every Secretary of Agriculture since 1913, wasn't around the department yesterday.

"Mr. Secretary," as the almost legendary figure often was called, was in Gallinger Hospital. The shock of being transferred to another branch was too much for him.

For 28 years he had worked in a cubicle next to the secretary's quarters. It was covered with autographed pictures of every President from Wilson to Roosevelt.

According to attaches, he was merely transferred from messenger for Secretary Wickard to messenger in another branch a couple of floors below. His services as a valet were no longer needed on the staff of the Cabinet officer who prides himself on being a "dirt farmer," it was said.

But to Crockett it was more than a transfer. It was a demotion. No longer would he hear himself playfully addressed as "Mr. Secretary" by his colleagues, no longer would he be able to brag that his boss "is as well dressed as President Roosevelt (a remark he made in the days when he spent him off-time looking after former Secretary Wallace's wardrobe at the latter's home.

Saturday some anonymous tipster called the District Attorney's office with certain allegations about Crockett. This was three days after his transfer and, because of his former connections with the official sanctum and its occupant, he was questioned by police.

Prosecutors talked to Crockett but declared the evidence insufficient to warrant a police charge. Certainly, though, his attitude was "peculiar," they said. And so yesterday the Department of Agriculture machinery rolled on, just as it did when Edward first went to work but he wasn't around to watch it.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Eugene Ormandy conducts the Philadelphia Orchestra in Constitution Hall Tuesday night, with Helen Jepson as soloist. Program: Symphony in D major (Haydn), Eight Etudes for Symphony Orchestra (Bennett), Reflets dans l'Eau (Debussy), Wein, Weib und Gesang (Strauss), three arias by Mozart and songs by Carpenter, Rakhmaninov and Hageman.

Visiting Washington for the third time this season, the Philadelphia Orchestra was cordially welcomed last evening by the usual large and happy throng in Constitution Hall. With the instrumentalists from the north came Helen Jepson as soloist, and as the program progressed, it became a question whether the singer or the orchestra was going to receive the larger amount of applause. In the end Miss Jepson won, for she was recalled five times after her second group of songs, and this ovation, added to the previous demonstrations after each song, made an impressive total.

BROWN

The blonde soprano of the Metropolitan Opera fully deserved the enthusiastic reception, for she was in excellent voice and has seldom, if ever, sung better than she did in the classical and modern styles. Moreover, she introduced to many of her auditors Mozart's rarely-heard scena and rondo, "Ch'io mi scordi di te," which is a thing of beauty. Unrelated to any opera, the semirecitative and lively aria were intended for vocal display, and the orchestral part was so scored as to throw the vocal line into relief. Miss Jepson endowed that line with charm and grace, and gave to the text its requisite emotional shadings. The lovely piano obligato, by the way, is not a modern addition, but was written by Mozart.

Continuing in the Mozartian vein, Miss Jepson offered Susana's aria, "Deh vieni, non tardar," and Cherubino's aria, "Non so piu cosa son," from "Le Nozze di Figaro." Both were delightfully delivered with finesse of phrasing and justness of accent. Her contrasting second group contained John Alden Carpenter's "When I Bring You Colored Toys," Rakhmaninov's "Vocalise" and Richard Hageman's "At the Well."

Eugene Ormandy, for some unfathomable reason, began the concert with one of Haydn's most frequently performed and recorded symphonies, "The Clock." For its exposition he utilized the full complement of the orchestra with rather unfortunate results from the viewpoint of proportion. It was like breaking a butterfly on the wheel. One would have preferred one of Haydn's overlooked symphonies performed with the number of musicians at that composer's command.

There was a compensating novelty in the first local performance of Robert Russell Bennett's sophisticated and engrossing "Eight Etudes for Symphony Orchestra." The program notes, provided by the composer to satisfy the public demand to know what music is about, gave the audience clews for laughter when mirth was due. But those who disregarded the notes until after the performance were wiser, since their attention was not drawn away from highly interesting studies in rhythm, dynamics, tone color and technique. These are taxing exercises, and an orchestra that can perform them as the Philadelphians did knows all the tricks.

Tux Totalitarianism Topples, Electors to Dine in Comfort

Herein are chronicled, for the enlightenment of posterity, events that led up to the ultimate triumph of democracy over regimentation in the matter of tuxedoes and black ties and the forthcoming Presidential Electors' dinner.

The electors' committee in charge of the banquet specified "evening clothes, black tie" on invitations to the affair.

Which elicited an indignant letter from South Carolina Elector James H. Hammond, Columbia lawyer, who wrote:

"Having such profound disrespect for a black tie and utter contempt for the illegitimate descendant of the evening suit—the tux—I have overcome the cowardice of submission and never shall regale myself in what I think is the most atrocious male attire—tux and black tie.

"As Prometheus, from his rock, with the moths plucking out its vitals, hangs my tux and tie. To the ambitionless waiter, who never hopes to be the head, I relegate the tux and tie.

"Where has democracy gone in such stringent regulations as tux and tie? All of us have howled democracy! Democracy! Liberty! Freedom! And during the campaign there was no mention then of tux nor tie.

"The ever echo of our opponents still rings back regimentation, as though they were forewarned of tuxes and ties. Was there a fifth or fifteenth columnist in our ranks who betrayed to our enemy the advance plans of this banquet, where all, dressed as 'chorus Johnnies,' we would be lined up in our tuxes and ties?"

To which the committee replied:

"Never let it be said that in this country of free men and freen enterprises that a man from South Carolina is prevented from doing what a bold elector from New York yesterday declared himself as doing, i. e. wearing a business suit to the Presidential electors' dinner. Or the man from Tennessee whom we have written we will welcome, even though wearing a 'legitimate evening suit.'"

Whereupon Elector Hammond wrote he would attend the banquet, since "the rules of the party have been amended."

Safety Drive Wins Support Of Citizens

Benning Association Urges D. C. Officials To Study Traffic Articles in Post

Cooperation with The Washington Post's traffic safety campaign was pledged last night by the Benning Citizens Association in a resolution that Post traffic stories be studied and suggestions followed by District traffic officials.

The association called for a safety platform at the corner of Thirty-fourth Street and Benning Road Northeast and elimination of the traffic bottleneck at Fifteenth and H Streets Northeast as means of cutting the accident rate in the Benning area.

Two recent drives of the association have been acted upon by the Board of Education, Claude A. Wood, president, announced. Construction of a new Junior High School for the Benning-Anacostia neighborhood east of the Anacostia River and alterations in the Benning School, at 588 Minnesota Avenue Northeast, have been promised, he said.

J. G. Pascoe was appointed chairman of the Metropolitan Police Boys' Club campaign committee in the Benning community.

Logan-Thomas Circle

Decrying the mounting 1941 traffic death toll, members of Logan-Thomas Circle Citizens Association last night went on record demanding rigid enforcement of the traffic regulations.

The unit particularly urged police and prosecutors to "bear down" on drunken drivers and speeders.

In another traffic resolution, the association favored the proposed cross-town bus, from Westmoreland Circle to Bladensburg Road, as means to expedite cross-Washington transportation.

Members also sought the placing of a plaque on the new Government structure which will replace historic Dolly Madison house, formerly one of the Cosmos Club buildings, to commemorate the site of the one-time First Lady's residence.

Stanton Park

The Stanton Park Citizens Association last night urged the District Commissioners to investigate the price of milk.

Meeting in the Peabody School, the association pointed out that the milk supply in the spring and summer is much greater than at other times of the year, and asked the commissioners to look into the possibility of lower prices in those seasons, at least.

The action followed a talk by a representative of the Chestnut Farms Dairy, P. E. LeFevre, who analyzed the milk problem and explained why the 14-cent price was necessary for delivered milk.

A report on the proposal to pipe more natural gas to the District was made at the meeting, but action was deferred for further study.

Summit Park

The Summit Park Citizens Association last night appealed to the National Capital Parks Commission to replace trees destroyed along Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast, between Second and Seventeenth Streets.

President J. S. Davis told the citizens that the District has agreed to build the proposed Oxon Run interceptor "within five or six months" to furnish sewer facilities to the area. He appointed a committee of Walton S. Allen, George Marshall and himself to aid prospective home-builders in the neighborhood in their relations with contractors.

Walton S. Allen was elected a delegate from the association to the Federation of Citizens Associations.

North Cleveland Park

"Unqualified opposition" was voiced to a proposed increase in taxicab rates at a meeting of the North Cleveland Park Citizens Association last night.

Any such increase would be "detrimental to the reputation of the city and unfair to our visitors," the citizens' resolution read, in criticizing the move to boost rates during the inauguration.

Members also apposed closing of Van Ness Street Northwest to block off the Bureau of Standards Grounds, stressing the increased fire hazard which result from blocking of fire engines from the area and the "decided inconvenience" to residents of that neighborhood.

They went on record as favoring the Overton resolution, which calls for an increased Federal contribution to the District budget, based on the percentage of Washington real etsate being used by the National Government.

Liquor Dealer Loses $60 in 6th Visit by Bandits

Two robbers, one with a sawed-off shotgun, held up Charles H. McGee in his liquor store at 1619 L Street Northwest shortly after 7 o'clock last evening and rifled the cash register of $60.

It was the sixth time in the last few years the McGee store had been held up. Three weeks ago his store was robbed of $40.

The pair who held him up last night, both bareheaded and one garbed in a long black raincoat, under which he kept the gun, escaped in a black sedan.

Night Life Trims Waistlines of Citizens Who Play Games, Work at Lafayette School

THEIR NIGHT LIFE—BADMINTON—This group of badminton players at the Lafayette School's "night club" included N. N. Mayer, John E. Parons, Betty Marsten and Jane Brown. Those at top preferred to linger at the handicraft table where basket weaving is the thing

Some citizens in the Chevy Chase area have found a night club where they can reduce the waistline instead of adding to it.

Last night the club was running wide open. It's in Lafayette School, Broad Branch Road and Northampton Street Northwest, and the maestro is the District Community Center and Playgrounds Department.

Ping pong, volley ball, badminton and shuffleboard make up the floor show, and for a dozen women who prefer to linger over a table there's a class in handicraft. It's all free.

An innovation is a women's class in calesthenics under the direction of Mrs. Vivian Schaefer which is "growing in popularity," she says.

Emmett Bailey, of 6146 Thirtieth Street Northwest, an employ of the Bureau of Standards, pointed out the chief attraction of the adult recreation group which meets at the school each Tuesday evening at 7 p. m.

He came panting out of a volley ball game to say, "This is giving me an opportunity for exercise I wouldn't ordinarily have. The best thing about it is that it's in the neighborhood."

Mrs. Josephine Byers, a worker with the playgrounds department, said, "People are skeptical at first of anything that's free. But they're catching on fast to the fun they can have here."

An enthusiastic member of the handicraft class, Mrs. J. A. Sencindiver, of 6650 Thirty-second Place Northwest, termed the class "a worthwhile opportunity close to home."

The Lafayette group has been meeting since November. It is one of many such groups scattered in the District.

Another De Luxe Picture Just Over the Horizon

'Philadelphia Story' Is Hepburn Triumph; Author Coming to Command Performance;' This, That and the Other About the Theater

IT IS TRUE what they say about Hepburn. Not that ancient and vindictive blast that placed her name near the top of the list of screen stars who were "poison at the box-office," but the recent blazing encomiums that have praised her performance in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's film version of Philip Barry's "The Philadelphia Story" smack through the stratosphere to the zenith. The first was rank calumny; the latter faint praise.

BELL

Having housed the stage premiere of "The Philadelphia Story" in the National Theater, Washington feels a particular interest in this supreme triumph of the Katharine Hepburn career and therefore should be eager to learn that the picture amplifies, rather than diminishes the effectiveness of the play with which it already is familiar. Had "Gone With the Wind," "The Great Dictator" and "The Philadelphia Story" been eligible for this year's voting, it would have been a simple matter to compile a list of the year's "Ten Best Pictures" that would have been bullet-proof.

A slightly augmented audience of Fourth Estaters would have rolled in the aisles of the Twentieth Century-Fox projection room at yesterday's preview if there were any aisles in the Twentieth Century-Fox projection room. As it was, they wallowed in hilarity but managed to stay in their comfortable chairs during most of the picture. In its sophisticated, upper-crust way—always allowing for that undertone of serious purpose—"The Philadelphia Story" is enormously amusing. Needless to say, it is played with complete perfection not only by Miss Hepburn, but by Cary Grant and Jimmy Stewart, her costars, and Ruth Hussey, Roland Young, Mary Nash, Johnny Halliday and Virginia Weidler, leading the support.

It will be coming along to the screen at Loew's Palace Theater in the wake of "Gone With the Wind"—if you can wait that long. Probably you will have to manage that waiting business, somehow, but it will be worth it.

Scarcely less interesting at yesterday's advance squinting were the screen tests that won Vivien Leigh the role of Scarlett O'Hara in "Gone With the Wind," borrowed by Division Manager Carter Barron, of Loew's, Inc., in the face of great difficulty. Not one test, but three were shown—the paddock scene, in which Scarlett hurls herself at Ashley's head, with Douglass Montgomery hammering away manfully at the role of Ashley; the dressing scene before the barbecue, with Hattie McDaniel in the Mammy role, and the library scene with Ashley, in which Leslie Howard appeared in the role he plays in the finished film. Any one of these would have been sufficient to justify Miss Leigh's selection for the then-coveted role of Scarlett—the tests were made on December 22, 1938. In combination, they reveal not only the great acting talent possessed by "Scarlett" Leigh, but equally with what skill the rough edges were polished off her performance by painstaking direction. Miss Leigh's "hair-tearing" in the black and white tests became the epitome of finesse in the finished Technicolor product—as will be seen at Loew's Palace, beginning tomorrow.

So today at 12:30, the Warner executives are screening "North West Mounted Police" for the eye-filling edification of the ladies and gentlemen (sic) of the press. This is Cecil B. DeMille's first adventure in Technicolor, with Gary Cooper, Madeleine Carroll, Preston Foster, Akim Tamiroff and Robert Preston in the top spots and—we shall see what we shall see, which ought to be plenty.

The latest flash on the matter is that the committee in charge of the 1941 President's Birthday Celebrations has received word from John Van Druten to the effect that he will take a 48-hour leave of absence from his Hollywood labors in order to be present in the National Theater, in this National Capital, on Sunday night, January 26. This, of course, would be to see Jane Cowl and Peggy Wood in his newest comedy hit, "Old Acquaintance." And this, of course, would be the play that has been chosen for the "command performance" for the benefit of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis. All of which is gradually adding up to quite an occasion.

New Warner Brothers Club rooms, located in the Tivoli Theater Building, Fourteenth Street and Park Road, Northwest, will be festively dedicated tonight at 11. The club's new quarters, planned for the recreation of all employes of the organization, include three separate rooms—a table-tennis room, card room and lounge and music room. They will be open daily, except Sunday, with Mrs. Mary Froistad as permanent hostess. Eileen "Sing-a-Song-With-Mike" Ritter will be guest hostess this evening. The officers of the club are James "Buster" Root, manager of the Tivoli, president; Harry Anger, vice president and chairman of entertainment, and Harry E. Lohmeyer, vice president in charge of welfare.

In case you missed it when it was downtown at the Little, "The Baker's Wife," starring that Chevalier of the Legion of Honor, Raimu, is on view at the Uptown Theater today and tomorrow.

In New Riggs Play at National

MARTHA SLEEPER AND LEIF ERICKSON
as they are seen in two of the leading roles in Lynn Riggs' new play, "The Cream in the Well," presented for the first time on any stage in the National Theater last night. The new work by the author of "Green Grow the Lilacs" and "Russet Mantle" is being offered in Washington preliminary to its Broadway premiere

'The Cream in the Well' Proves Feeble and Futile Drama of Sex

By Nelson B. Bell

"THE CREAM IN THE WELL." Carly Wharton and Martin Gabel present a new play in two acts and four scenes, by Lynn Riggs. Staged by Mr. Gabel; settings by Jo Mielziner. At the National Theater.

—THE CAST—

Bina	Virginia Campbell
Mrs. Sawters	Mary Morris
Julie	Martha Sleeper
Mr. Sawters	Ralph Theadore
Opal Dunham	Perry Wilson
Gard Dunham	Myron McCormick
Clabe	Leif Erickson
Blocky Lockhart	Harry Bratsburg

In "The Cream in the Well," presented by Carly Wharton and Martin Gabel for the first time on any stage in the National Theater last night, Lynn Riggs—and we are not unmindful of the success of his earlier "Green Grow the Lilacs" and "Russet Mantle"—has compounded two acts and four scenes of as indecisive and futile "drama" as has found its way to the boards in recent seasons.

As starkly grim as Noel Langley's "Farm of Three Echoes," without the cackling humor of Miss Barrymore's Ouma Gerart to temper its morbidity, "The Cream in the Well" sets up as its central character a sort of neurotic composite of Lady Macbeth, Lucrezia Borgia and Regina Giddens, of "The Little Foxes," which embodies the worst features of each. She is quite willing to kill, except that her weapons are psychologic and her poisons those of a mind deeply submerged in evil and an abysmal selfishness. The havoc she brings to herself and those about her is conclusive and overwhelming.

Although the direction it is to take is confusingly nebulous, there is early promise in the play of an unexpected and forceful climax. Since the piece takes no definite direction, the promise never is fulfilled and remains only a consummation devoutly to be wished as the final curtain descends.

High Hopes Fall With Thud

There is a point approaching the end of the last act where it is implied that the lugubrious developments that have gone before have merely been leading up to an analogy between human and national hatreds and that what Mr. Riggs has had it in his mind to say all along is something pertaining to the horror and indefensibility of war. But that bubble immediately explodes in the face of the auditor and it turns out that what Mr. Riggs has been talking about all this time is the more lamentable aspects of incest. It is a very thorough disappointment. Especially so, since it gets nobody on either side of the footlights anywhere of importance or worth going.

The dramatis personae of Mr. Riggs' gloomy fable are a father, mother, two daughters and a son, working huge acreage in the Indian Territory of 1906, before the area was taken into the Union as a part of the State of Oklahoma, and their nearest neighbors, only three in number. The son has departed the homestead before the opening of the theoretical action and does not return until the beginning of the second act. In the meantime, his neurasthenic sister, Julie, has been made the legatee of the entire blame for his sudden and inexplicable departure in a letter written on United States Navy stationery from across the world; she has goaded Opal Dunham, a long-standing rival in love, to her death, married Gard Dunham herself and brought catastrophe to the lives of all. Her mother understands and delivers her daughter a pointless lecture on the error of her philosophy of life in which she imparts practically nothing of worth either to the daughter or the play. It is not until Brother Clabe's return from his wandering pilgrimage of personal soul-destruction that it is revealed that he and Julie are hopelessly in love with each other and she meets her doom on the thin ice of the lake while he sits placidly at the livingroom table intent upon preventing interruption of her noble act of restitution. The point, if any, seems to be that hatred will not quench hatred and destruction will not destroy destruction. The premise, one feels, may be accepted at face value.

Actors Are Heavily Burdened

The pathological characters with which the author has peopled his play are a heavy burden upon the shoulders of the players. Martha Sleeper, in the role of Julie, is given no shred of normal womanliness that might be woven into even a slender bond of sympathy. There is an ugly word in the vocabulary of dog breeders that fits the character perfectly. Miss Sleeper's effective reading of her lines and simulation of relentless mental anguish are unhappily of no avail. Leif Erickson makes a stalwart figure of an unbelievable brother. The only ray of brightness is shed through the spirited and at times humorous miming of Virginia Campbell, as Bina, the not quite bright, but happy, younger daughter. Miss Campbell is Mr. Riggs' shining deed in his naughty world. An excellent performance, too, is given by Ralph Theodore, the paterfamilias of the farmlands, with his lusty oaths, warm heart and ineffectuality in the face of burning problems. Mary Morris, as his wife, is a shade more Park Avenue than virgin prairie. Perry Wilson and Myron McCormick fit the Dunhams nicely into the drab picture and Jo Mielziner's two settings are commensurate with their purpose.

The legend was that the cream in that particular well always curdled. Mr. Riggs has perpetuated the phenomenon with unfortunate realism.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Jan. 14 (INS).—Many people will buy the March Cosmopolitan magazine just to read "Benjamin Blake," by Edison Marshall, for the Literary Guild has picked it as their novel for March. Darryl Zanuck, in line with other producers, keeps his ears glued to the ground to hear the reports on these novels. So he bought the Marshall novel, paying a figure estimated to be over $50,000—a big price for an unpublished novel.

PARSONS

The story is similar in type and scope to "Anthony Adverse," being a biography of a man who lives in Colonial days and figures in adventures which take him all over the world. William Perlberg will produce it and Tyrone Power will undoubtedly play the hero, for it is the sort of thing he does so well.

When is Paramount going to keep its promise to do something important for Susan Hayward? She must be very weary of hearing them say they want to give her the chance she deserves. In spite of their insistence she is a great bet, she hasn't made a picture at Paramount. Now she is on the Republic lot, playing the role of the cousin in "Sis Hopkins," and they want her for a second movie but Para said no, we have big things in view for her—but when?

Leave it to Carmen Miranda to do the unusual. Believe me, Hollywood will miss the vivid little Miranda now she's finished "The Road to Rio." She was wearing a gorgeous necklace of aquamarines and turquoises when the cameramen told her the last scene was finished. Carmen took off the necklace and gave a beautiful stone to every member of the crew. "Theez is a funny gift for you boys," Carmen explained, "but you all got girl friends, no?"

Chatter in Hollywood: The most excited girl in town was Brenda Joyce who was at the studio receiving the congratulations of everyone at Twentieth Century-Fox. She will wed Owen Ward Saturday at St. Alban's Church. Twenty-five of her close friends will attend the ceremony. She will be married by the rector of St. Alban's. Brenda and Owen leave for a honeymoon in Yosemite after the ceremony.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Linda Darnell and Garson Kanin at Ciro's attracted more attention than any twosome in weeks. Mickey Rooney, Linda's other admirer, was at the House of Murphy the same night with Gene Tierney; Tallulah Bankhead, all done up in a new hat and dress, refused to kiss any of her friends at George Cukor's cocktail party until she took off her chapeau.

Judith Anderson was there with Orry Kelly. Al Vanderbilt sat in a corner with a pretty girl; Virginia and Darryl Zanuck receiving congratulations on their seventeenth wedding anniversary. They went on to Ciro's taking the Mervyn Leroys and the Bill Goetzes. George certainly knows how to give parties and I have never seen people have more fun at a cocktail party. It went on and on; the Jack Warners entertained informally in honor of Jack Krindler and his pretty bride; Sylvia Fairbanks was there and she was very interesting in telling about Lady Mendl, over 80, who doesn't wear glasses, has all of her teeth and has the figure of a girl of 16. To hear about her makes one feel that getting old isn't so bad.

Mrs. Diana Fitzmaurice, who has been in New York since George's death, returns to Hollywood Friday; Mary Beth Hughes and Alan Gordon a Mocambo twosome.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Capitol

"HUDSON'S BAY." Paul Muni abandons the solemn, scholarly roles which have occupied him of late to play Pierre Radisson, daring renegade who saved a new world for the King who ordered him hanged. The King is gay Charles II, played by Vincent Price, and the supporting company further includes Gene Tierney, Laird Cregar, John Sutton, Virginia Field and Nigel Bruce. "Inaugural Revue" stars that cyclonic Cuban, Diosa Costello, in a holiday stage revue which further features mimic Dean Murphy, the Great Yacopis, the Adrian Rollini Trio and the Rhythm Rockets. Opens tomorrow morning.

Earle

Palace

"GONE WITH THE WIND." The award-winning film of the generation returns to F street for its first anniversary engagement under a policy which boasts of "nothing cut but the prices." The film will be presented four times daily under a continuous performance policy. Doors will open at 9 a. m., with the day's final showing going on the screen at 9 p. m. Clark Gable, Vivien Leigh, Leslie Howard, Olivia de Havilland and Hattie McDaniel, head the cast of thousands in this Technicolor adaptation of the Margaret Mitchell novel. Opens tomorrow morning.

Metropolitan

"ESCAPE TO GLORY." This new melodrama of a freighter crossing to America just before the declaration of the present war stars Pat O'Brien and Constance Bennett. The various passengers' reactions when a German U boats attacks the ship forms the drama of the tale. The supporting cast includes John Halliday, Melville Cooper, Alan Baxter, Edgar Buchanan, Marjorie Gateson, Stanley Logan and Erwin Kalser. Opens Friday morning.

RKO-Keith's

"KITTY FOYLE." Ginger Rogers' playing of the Chistopher Morley heroine continues for a third week on the Fifteenth Street screen. Others in this picturization of the story of a "white collar" girl include Dennis Morgan, James Craig and Odette Myrtil.

Columbia

"FLIGHT COMMAND." After a week at the Capitol, this air film made by M-G-M with the cooperation of the U. S. Navy, returns to F street with Robert Taylor, Ruth Hussey, Walter Pidgeon and Shepperd Strudwick in the pivotal roles. Opens tomorrow morning.

Little

"PASTOR HALL." Based on the martyrdom of Pastor Martin Neimoller at the hands of the Nazis, this English-made film, with a foreword by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, has entered its second week. Wilfred Lawson plays the great German churchman and the supporting cast is headed by Nova Pilbeam and Sir Seymour Hicks.

Trans-Lux

"BRITISH COLUMBIA." The Canadian province is the subject of this travelogue by Andre de la Varre, one of the supporting shorts on the incoming bill at the newsreel house. Walt Disney's "Fire Chief," with Donald Duck; an "Information Please," with Anna Negale as guest expert, and "The Living Flowers," depicting the life of a butterfly, also are on the bill. Opens Friday morning.

Gayety

"HINDA BELLES." Hinda Wassau makes her second visit to the Capital's burlesque center for the week beginning Sunday afternoon. On the new bill with the popular charmer are Binder and Rosen and Billy "Scratch" Wallace. The current bill, starring Marlane and Charlie Kemper, continues through this Saturday's midnight performance.

Comic Horton Signed for 'Sunny'

Edward Everett Horton, outstanding comedian and one of the most popular players of stage and screen, has been signed for a feature role in Anna Neagle's next starring vehicle, "Sunny," film version of the Broadway hit which Herbert Wilcox will produce and direct for RKO Radio.

Also signed to the cast of the picture starting next month are Ray Bolger and Paul and Grace Hartman. This will be the third consecutive filmusical by Miss Neagle for RKO.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Jan. 14.

WM. KNUDSEN: W. Averell Harriman, now an aide in the National Defense Council, will be elevated within a few days to a more important post in another department . . . NYA: Leopold Stokowski, who made a good-will tour of South America with your orchestra, has offered his full-time services to the President . . . GERTRUDE LAWRENCE: For eight years Victor Mature has tried to crash Broadway. After he became a Hollywood star, Mature relinquished his film salary to work in your new show, "Lady in the Dark," which promises to be such a hit. Those who have seen the tryouts insist that Mature performs admirably in this his first chance on Broadway. But today, three days before the premiere he must report for a physical exam at his Draft Board.

LYONS

LORD HALIFAX: An American who just has returned from Vichy is assuring his friends that there are two types of Frenchmen now, Anglophiles and Anglophobes . . . The French Anglophile says: "England always has been our friend and always will be. They tried to help us but we were doomed. I certainly hope England wins" . . . The French Anglophobe says: "England double-crossed us. They let us do all the fighting. And at the crucial moment they showed their true colors by quitting us at Dunkirk. Those dirty soandsos. I certainly hope England wins."

H. C. HOPSON: Willard L. Thorp, trustee of your Associated Gas & Elec. Corpn., returned from a tour of the company's Southern properties on Thursday. He was highly enthusiastic about the success of his dealing in behalf of A. G. & E. "Look, fellas," he reported to his colleagues, "I did a marvelous piece of business down South," and started handing out a roll of $20 bills—all Confederate . . . ED FLYNN: The White House staff is running a pool on the number of guests who will respond to the invitations for the Inaugural functions . . . ARTURO TOSCANINI: Justice Ferdinand Pecora was asked about the custom of rising when a jurist enters the courtroom. "What would you do if Toscanini came into your courtroom?" he was asked. "In that case," said Pecora, I would rise."

STEVE EARLY: Geoffrey Hellman, who writes Profiles for the New Yorker and for Life magazine, was assigned by the editors of Life to write a Profile about Franklin D. Roosevelt. . . The diligent Hellman went to Washington and there saw the the President's oldest friends. Because Time and Life had been so pro-Willkie during the campaign, these friends were reluctant to supply any information or anecdotes about F. D. They felt that Life would pursue its pre-election policy and give the President the worst of it in the Profile . . . Hellman, confronted with this silence, therefore, "wrote" an article based entirely on fancy—an article in which all the stories were concocted. This was shown to a few people . . . Shortly thereafter Hellman received the co-operation he wanted and wrote the piece which will appear.

BILLY WILKERSON: Milton Berle, who went to Hollywood for "Tall, Dark and Handsome," met Joe Frisco there. Joe assured him that he no longer was wasting his time on horse races, but was concentrating all his thoughts on getting back to stardom. "Let's get together," Berle told him. "Where do you live?" . . . "I live," Frisco informed, "a mile and a furlong from Ciro's" . . . ERNEST HEMINGWAY: Your lawyer, Maurice Speiser, has succeeded in selling the Spanish and German rights to your anti-Fascist book, "For Whom the Bell Tolls." The German edition will be published in Stockholm.

ROBT. JACKSON: Prince Hohenlohoe, whose mother was ordered to leave the country, is the local movie correspondent for La Pesta Lloyd of Budapest. But because of the ban on foreign films there, the only reviews he can send over are those of Walt Disney's shorts.

SECRETARY OF WAR STIMSON: Last week's newspapers reported that one of the President's Harvard classmates is a prisoner of war in a Nazi camp. He's not the first martial-minded classmate of the President. The first was a boy of 14, who, in 1898, convinced classmate F. D. Roosevelt, then also 14, that they should run away from school and join the army in the war against Spain. "We're both big for our age, Franklin," the boy told him, and "our country needs us. So let's do a man's job and fight." The pact was made and they agreed to run away from school to fight . . . That night they hid in a pie wagon en route to the recruiting station. "My forehead's warm," the boy confessed . . . "So's mine," said Franklin, "but let's forget it. We're men now and our duty is greater than everything" . . . An hour later the boy complained of a parched throat . . . "So's mine," Franklin told him, "but let's forget that, too. After all, we've taken on a man's job. We've got to be real men now" . . . But they never got to the war. The next day Franklin D. Roosevelt and his classmate broke out with measles.

In Hollywood

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

With so many fighting for the insecure, dizzy pinnacle of being known as Hollywood's best hostess, I'd like to tell you about Cobina Wright's ability in that direction. She really threw a party. Her daughter's finished her first picture at Twentieth Century they live in a small, unpretentious house, you were squeezed in a little like the proverbial sardine, but that seemed to make things all the more chummy. She served wonderful Italian food. When dinner was over, the chef came into the parlor and gave an imitation of Chevalier singing a French song, after which Cobina warmed her vocal chords before Gracie Fields took over—and how that gal can put over a song.

HOPPER

She's a knockout in any man's language. No wonder I couldn't get in to hear her the last time I was in England. When her name goes up, the house is sold out in 21 hours.

Seems to me everybody there joined in the fun—Reggie Gardiner, Edgar Bergen, Jerry Colonna, Alice Faye, who looks radiantly happy. And speaking of Alice, I heard her do "Vivacious Lady" over the air the other night, and thought, now there's a girl who can do what Ginger Rogers is doing—go from musical comedy to straight dramatic parts. Yet they have the picture "Belle Starr" at her own studio, and Alice didn't get it. But it's going to take more than a few discouragements to kill that girl's spirit. She's got guts.

Sorry Babs Hutton and Cary Grant couldn't stay. But Rex St. Cyr, who's giving a costume party on the 26th, was hoping Cobina's guests would repeat at his party.

The Sam Goldwyns were in rare form, and Sam reminisced about the past. Told me Mable Normand got Chaplin's first salary raised from $100 to $125 a week, when he worked for Mack Sennett. Sennett didn't think Charlie was funny till, after many make-ups, Charlie begged to be allowed to do his own make-up and costume, which were those of the little tramp we know so well. Years later, when Charlie was offered $1,000 a week, he wouldn't sign unless he got $1,050. "What's the fifty for?" he was asked. "A guy's got to live, hasn't he?" said Chaplin. But when he got $650,000 a year, that made history in more ways than one.

At that time, Mary Pickford was struggling along on a couple of thousand a week. When the news was brought in to her, she became actively ill on the set, and had to be taken home. Soon after, she signed her first million dollar contract. Up to that time, they used to turn out her pictures for $25,000 apiece. Then the cost jumped immediately to $250,000. But instead of bringing in the $50,000 they used to, the first one took in a million and a half. And Hollywood, which had been in New York, was born.

Flu Reports Indicate Peak In Outbreak

U. S. Officials Warn Against Premature Optimism, However

Although public health officials warned against premature optimism, there were indications yesterday that the influenza outbreak sweeping eastward across the country has reached its peak.

Telegraphed reports reaching the United States Public Health Service yesterday showed that 51,559 new cases of flu were recorded in 23 scattered States last week. This was a reduction of 218, compared with totals reported by the same 23 States during the previous week.

No Flu Deaths Here

Prevalence of the infection in the District, however, shows no signs of abating. Twenty-two more cases were reported yesterday to the Health Department, bringing the total for 1941 to 183. This compares with 53 cases of flu for the entire month of January last year.

Nevertheless, it was pointed out at the District Building that there have been no flu deaths to date, whereas there were two fatalities during the first two weeks of last January.

Meantime, The Post learned that the Capital's largest localized outbreak, that at the National Training School for Boys, is probably the same type of influenza which broke out on a big scale in California several weeks ago and then began spreading eastward.

Victims of Type A

Dr. John W. Oliphant, of the National Institute of Health, who took blood samples from 20 of the training school youths, said the results to date of laboratory tests indicate they were victims of the Type A influenza virus. More than 80 cases have occurred at the school this month.

At the height of the California epidemic, Dr. Oliphant went there to collect blood specimens of a number of the flu sufferers. Analyzed at the National Institute of Health here, the samples revealed the disease to be Type A.

"A" includes all the known forms of influenza except one, which was isolated last year and classified as Type B. So far, no "B" influenza has been discovered in the present epidemic.

British Again Turn French Ship Back

Montevideo, Uruguay, Jan. 14 (AP). The 8,199-ton French merchant ship Mendoza, loaded with food bought in Argentina, lost again late today to the British auxiliary cruiser Asturias in her third attempt to run the British blockade and reach France.

The Mendoza, already twice turned back, sailed from Montevideo Roads at midday but at sundown she was observed heading wearily back along the edge of Uruguay's territorial waters, with the Britisher a short distance to seaward.

Mrs. Deegan Back Home, Just Won't Talk

U. S. Embassy Aide Nazis Held in Paris, Two Diplomats Arrive

By Inez Robb.

International News Service Staff Writer

New York, Jan. 14.—If the Gestapo got a nickel's worth of information out of Mrs. Elizabeth R. Deegan when the Nazis placed the former receptionist of the American Embassy in Paris under arrest for a fortnight last month, the boys are to be congratulated.

They are better men than the metropolitan news hawks who met Mrs. Deegan today when she returned from Europe via transatlantic clipper plane.

Red-headed Mrs. Deegan would not even admit that she had been held by the Germans. Nor would she discuss the German charge that she had aided a British officer to flee occupied France.

Cecil M. P. Cross, first secretary of the Paris Embassy, and Leigh Hunt, Embassy trade commissioner, accused of the same high crimes and misdemeanors by German authorities, were just as mum as Mrs. Deegan. All three have been transferred from the Paris post at the demand of German officials.

"Any information had better come from Washington," said Cross, to whom Mrs. Deegan referred all questioners. Amiable, but obviously reluctant to talk, Cross would not even say if, when or where Mrs. Deegan had been arrested and detained by German authorities, as affirmed here more than a month ago.

"Was she held by the Germans?" he was finally asked.

"Well, your State Department says so, and it's usually pretty accurate," he smiled.

"With that Irish face and that red hair, I'll bet you were equal to all the Germans in Paris," a reporter said to Mrs. Deegan, a pleasant woman in her middle thirties. "Did you make 'em sorry they'd picked on you?"

"I think they regret it more now than they did then," was the immediate and cryptic response of Cross, who refused to enlarge on his oblique admission that the American redhead had been equal to her captors.

All three said they would leave at once for Washington to report to the State Department. Mrs. Deegan looked none the worse for her bout with the German police. A tall, handsome woman, she was smartly dressed in a plain black crepe frock, a hip-length black Persian lamb jacket and a black wool Jersey turban. Her long, pointed fingernails were a fiery red.

After she has reported to Washington, Mrs. Deegan said she planned to visit her family in Asheville, N. C. She is a granddaughter of North Carolina's one-time Senator Jeter Pritchard. Her 14-year-old daughter and her divorced husband are in Huntsville, Ala.

Finis Written to Rubber Empire Dream as Seiberling Loses Suit

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Jan. 14.—A judge sadly wrote a formal finis today to the "beautiful relationship" of two men who dealt in millions and dreamed of making America the master of the world's rubber.

The court gave Edgar B. Davis, Texas oil man, a $634,000 decision over Frank A. Seiberling, 81-year-old rubber magnate.

In his 40-page opinion, Judge Frank J. Lausche remarked:

"May I say to F. A. Seiberling and Edgar B. Davis that it is most unfortunate and tragic that the beautiful relationship which existed between them had to come to such a cruel and tragic ending.

"Each of these men, in the midst of their friendship, was prepared to sacrifice for the other all of his material properties. They dreamed together the formation of a huge rubber growing and manufacturing enterprise.

"Edgar B. Davis hoped to bring to America the control of the great rubber growing industry now in the control of foreign nations. He visualized F. A. Seiberling as the head of that huge enterprise.

"On the other hand F. A. Seiberling had such implicit confidence in Edgar B. Davis that he was willing to trust Edgar B. Davis with a substantial part of his material property.

"Though the amount at first glance seems great, yet when the expense of the litigation is paid, when the legitimate creditors of Ohio Goodyear are compensated, I seriously and sincerely doubt the wisdom of this litigation."

Davis—an almost legendary figure who spent $1,500,000 "angeling" one of Broadway's biggest flops, "The Ladder," because the play expounded his views on reincarnation—was sued by relatives of Seiberling as the result of a $500,000 loan the oil man made to the Akron octogenarian 14 years ago. Loans, by then, were not new to the rubber magnate. In 1893 he started by borrowing $3,500 from another friend for the down payment on four empty buildings which became the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co.

Seiberling was Goodyear's president until 1921. After financial difficulties unseated him he founded the Seiberling Tire & Rubber Co., of which he still is chairman.

When Seiberling's "pay-off" company encountered difficulties in 1926, Davis pitched in $500,000, and Ohio Goodyear Securities Co. was formed to effectuate the transaction.

More recently the rubber magnate's family went to court, contending he repaid the $500,000 and that Davis agreed to take no profit on the deal.

Ruling the Seiberlings had no claim to assets of Davis-controlled Ohio Goodyear—now worth $634,000—because "no trust was established" in connection with it, the Court commented:

"Whether the gain of Ohio Goodyear exceeds in value the social and spiritual losses suffered alike by Davis and Seiberling, I very much doubt."

Pre-Mission Rallies Hear 2 Clergymen

Representatives from 40 Protestant congregations, attending National Christian Mission rallies last night in two churches, heard "revitalized Christianity" urged to meet the present world crisis.

Dr. Raphael Harwood Miller, general chairman of the local Mission—due here February 2-9—said at Vermont Avenue Baptist and Emory Methodist Churches that there must be a reaffirmation of Christian faith and a restatement of the Kingdom of God's objectives if the Christian Church is to fulfill its mission today.

Dr. W. L. Darby, executive secretary of the Mission, outlined the plans for the project and called for a demonstration of Christianity's "solid front." He and Dr. Miller were presented at Emory Church by Dr. Horace E. Cromer, pastor, and at the Vermont Avenue Church by Dr. C. T. Murray, pastor.

Drs. Miller and Darby will address a Mission rally tonight at 8 o'clock at McKendree Methodist Church, Rhode Island and South Dakota Avenues Northeast, and next week at Foundry Methodist and Chevy Chase Presbyterian Churches.

The National Christian Mission, which began last September in 22 major metropolitan areas, opened in Philadelphia Sunday night with 9,000 persons in Convention Hall. Thirty noted religious leaders, headed by Dr. E. Stanley Jones, missionary to India, will speak here.

Will Discuss War

Barnet Nover, Washington Post columnist, will discuss "The War Situation" at the Jewish Community Center Institute at 8:30 p. m. tonight. David Wiener, attorney, will preside and lead the general discussion after Nover's talk.

Tear Gas Gun Injures Clerk Of Sen. Burton

Hand Is Deeply Cut When Long-Forgotten Weapon Blows Up

Maynard Waterfield, 25, correspondence clerk for Harold R. Burton, new Republican Senator from Ohio, was in Casualty Hospital yesterday, victim of a tear gas gun that had been hidden so long no one knew what it was.

The gun, owned by Senator Burton, exploded when Waterfield picked it up to examine, causing a deep gash in his right hand and filling the Senator's offices with gas.

Senator Burton was out of town. Members of his staff opened windows and called police. Waterfield was taken to the hospital where doctors said that the injury would not permanently affect the use of his hand.

A moment before the explosion, Earl E. Hart, secretary to Senator Burton, had discovered the gun, examined it, and put it aside.

Hart explained that the gun was given to Senator Burton about three years ago while the latter was Mayor of Cleveland. The gun, said Hart, was a sample left by an agent for a tear gas firm which had sought to sell some of the weapons to the city government in an outbreak of strikes.

Hart said Burton had the gun put away so that no one would get hurt, then forgot about it. The gun was packed with Burton's other office belongings, and sent to his new Senate office. The explosion came a few minutes after it was unpacked.

Waterfield, who lives at 13 McDonald Place Northeast, is expected to return to work early next week, Hart said. Waterfield is a native of Sandusky, Ohio, and a former clerk for Senator Johnson (Republican), of California.

Aldrich Urges Taxes, Bonds For Defense

Huge Amount of Money Seeks Sound Investment, Bank Chairman Says

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 14.—Winthrop W. Aldrich, chairman of the Chase National Bank, today recommended that the United States Government finance the huge defense program as far as possible by increased taxation and direct sale of Government securities to the public in order to forestall inflation.

"There is an immense amount of money in the country seeking sound investment," Aldrich told stockholders of Chase National—the country's largest bank—at their anual meeting.

"The owners of savings and investment funds will be ready and willing to lend them to the Government. They include not only the large institutional holders of money, such as the insurance companies, the savings banks and university and other endowment funds, but also numerous private investors, large and small."

He suggested new bonds to be issued "should carry a fair rate of return, that they be available in small as well as large denominations, and that they be fully taxable. In order also not to penalize the patriotic subscriber who overestimates his capacity to buy, I suggest that the new bonds be made freely marketable."

Aldrich said there is a certain limit beyond which taxation for defense, as for other purposes, should not go.

He said: "This is the point at which taxation becomes destructive, in the sense that it encroaches upon the capital equipment of the country. Determining where this point lies is one of the most difficult and delicate decisions that Congress is called upon to make."

Aldrich said the "easy" way to finance defense requirements would be to place the principal share of new funds required with banks but that it was unwise to do so.

Aldrich indorsed current Congressional bills to give the Administration full power to extend aid to countries opposing "ruthless aggression," but said the grant of power should be temporary.

He reported deposits in his bank at a new high of $3,543,338,000 and earnings for the year of $1.83 per share of capital stock, compared with $1.80 in 1939.

Gordon S. Rentschler, chairman of the National City Bank of New York, told stockholders at the annual meeting the war "is the dominating influence in every foreign area where we operate and in almost every phase of our domestic business."

"The bank," Rentschler said, "is actively participating in the financing of the national defense program at all of its various stages—that is, in the furnishing of funds for the construction of plants, for the primary supply contracts, for subcontracts and for other businesses more remotely affected."

Rentschler said total bank deposits increased nearly 25 per cent in 1940.

JIMMIE LANIN, the Waldorf Astoria's notable maestro, will bring his band to the Shoreham's Blue Room next Sunday eve for the testimonial dinner, reception and ball to be given in honor of Polish-decended members of Congress by the Paderewski Club of Washington. West Point cadets coming to town for the inaugural will also be special guests.

The Lanin Orchestra is one of the outstanding upper-bracket crews of the country, played for Mrs. Roosevelt's June Ball, Elsa Maxwell's Red and White Ball, the President's Birthday Ball at the Waldorf Astoria last year. It has also tootled sweetly at parties given by Mrs. E. T. Stotesbury, Conde Nast, Mrs. John Jacob Astor, Countess Haugwitz Reventlow. On Sunday night they'll feature Vinennese waltzes, congas, rumbas and "sweet swing."

The "Spotlight Guild," exclusively for musicians, show people and their friends, is due to open next Friday at Eleventh Street and Pennsylvania Avenue, over Whelan's Drug Store. It will be open from 2 to 5 a. m. with admission by card only. Vince Carr, head of Baltimore's Spotlight Guild, will be in charge with Washington's Ernie Simon as his right bower.

PRACTICALLY SOLD TO BMI, we hear from Paul Kain, Mayfair's maestro, are "So Nice to Have Known You," composed by Barbara McMasters, the brainy young secretary of Lloyd Dennis, WJSV program director—also "You Didn't Care at All," the brain child of announcer Lee Vickers . . . Another favorite BMI verdict has been handed down on "It's Snowing Diamonds Tonight," written by pianist Eddie Chase of the Pall Mall Room and sung nightly by Russ Cullen . . . Matt Windsor is just back from New York where he submitted six records of his songs (made by himself and Eileen George) to BMI. The outlook is mightly favorable . . . "Consolations," beautiful number written by Vic Nini, of Ciro's Famous Village, has been accepted by BMI.

TURNABOUT. rs. Lily Santmyer, owner of La Salle Versailles, never misses an afternoon of tea dancing to Dick Koons' music in the Mayflower Lounge. You can identify her by her cute blonde bangs and her favorite costume of black with gorgeous costume jewelry. . . . And it's a custom of Sidney of the Mayflower and Mrs. Sidney to drop into Versailles around midnight. They've grown children, but still hold hands. Some marriages must be marvelous!

LOTUS' THIRTEENTH BIRTHDAY WEEK starts today with a new super-show headed by a "Parade of the Nations" with the Tom Ball Girls promenading glitteringly as the Misses England, China, Mexico, France, Russia, Spain, India and America. The Marlin Sisters are a three-girl circus, do stunts usually reserved for Ringling's. Dances by Le Blanc and Franklin include dramatic versions of "Deep Purple" and "Bolero." There's also a Scotch number wherein the lassies swing sporrans and kilties in a manner more reminiscent of Benny Goodman than Bobby Burns. Buddy Shaner is currently emceeing and nightingaling around Berkeley Square, makes a sweet job of both chores.

Straight Debussy with a rhythm background was aired in the Cosmos Room last night when Carmen Cavallaro pianoed "Clair Le Lune" as composed while his orchestra added trimmings. Cosmos patrons are so dithered over Carmen's piano solos that they're demanding them often in preference to dance numbers.

TIN PAN ALLEY MEMORIES. Frank Romer, the Neptune Room's publicity pressure man, led the orchestra at Shanley's in New York back before World War 1. He relates that going into Tin Pan Alley late one night to get some music, he saw a young fellow sleeping on a bench. An attendant said, "He's all tired out from writing a tune. Here it is. Take a look at it." It was "Alexander's Ragtime Band."

PENNY PEPPER that blonde torpedo, has just returned to Del Rio to sing with George Ray's orchestra in the Fiesta Room. Penny, you'll remember, is suga 'n dynamite, sings like a house a-fire, is beautiful as a forest fire. Del Rio rates public thanks for bringing her back.

QUICKIES. Ray Kinney, whose orchestra tops the Earl Theater stage show, and his manager, Jimmy McKenzie, hopped out to the Metronome Room after their last show the other eve, foregathered with Ray Heatherton and his band.

DICK LAM, head man at Lotus, and Dick, jr., whose birthday falls on the same date as Lotus' anniversary.

There's talk that the Kinney Orchestra may return to Washington as a night spot attraction . . . Vin Gallagher, owner of the King Cole Room, is just back from Florida, looking around for some one to replace Arthur Todd, who leaves for Nassau next week . . . Members of Don Carper's Four alternate in playing for the 4 to 7 cocktail hour in Cafe Caprice, thus providing a new face and new music every day . . . Guido, psychoanalyst of the Rainbow Room, has psyched Sally Rand, vows she's an intellectual when she isn't waving those fans . . . All those new officers down at Fort Humphreys are finding River Bend a great place for a spot of diversion and dancing.

Patricia Prochnik and her songs have made such a thumping hit at the Troika that her engagement has already been extended. She'll be at La Helen Hamilton's spot for at least six weeks we're told.

THE MUSIC YOU PREFER. Those sweet sounds you hear over WRC at 10 a. m. are Madrillon's Carr and Don on two pianos, Pan-American music accented . . . Lounge Riviera patrons can't get enough of those "Cabin in the Sky" tunes played by Pete Macias' Band. Jimmy Nichols and Ray Donahue sing 'em as well as Ethel Waters, but differently . . . Hi Hat's Louis Montisano and Jack Reid (of the Four M's) doing things to the "Sugar Blues" with guitar and trumpet . . . Jack (Jive) Schafer of the Casino Royal in any vocal or trumpet number he chooses to do. If he didn't do at least six encores, he'd be mobbed . . . The way Brownie's Band at Kavakos' Grill takes "Tuxedo Junction" apart and puts it together again.

THE NIGHTINGALE SINGS, not in Berkeley Square, but at our town's own Nightingale which happens to be down in Virginia a little way. The nightingale of the Nightingale is Tommy Lawrence, young Canadian who's just become an American citizen, sings romantic songs surpassingly well.

HOME COOKIN'. The brisket of beef with horseradish sauce that you get at Restaurant 823, Fifteenth Street is in the best tradition of home cooking . . . Ditto for the thick, rich vegetable soup at Dick's Grill. Dick makes it himself, after his wife's recipe . . . If your wife is a very wonderful cook, perhaps she can concoct chicken a la king as delicious as you'll get at the Silver Fox out Chevy Chase way.

Mexico Against 'Any Aggressor'

Mexico City, Jan. 14 (AP).—Mexico would consider "aggression against any Pan American country whatever as an aggression against Mexico," Foreign Minister Ezequiel Padilla said tonight at a press conference.

Mexico has an army of 52,000 and a small navy and air corps.

Asked by a German news agency correspondent what Mexico's stand would be if the United States declared war on Germany, the minister declined to amplify his statement.

With Shirley Povich

(War may force Max Schmeling to give up his European boxing title—News item)

Now wouldn't that be a fine state of affairs (or would it?). And what on earth would come of us all if Schmeling were forced to step down as European champion. This old world would, indeed, be an empty place. No European heavyweight champion? Say it isn't so.

POVICH

Maybe, though, we are alarmists. If worst does come to worst and Schmeling does abdicate his title, the chances are that the world somehow would struggle along. The philosophic French might simply call it c'est la guerre and try to forget. The British might steel themselves and say they'll muddle through. In America there's a fair chance that we'd shrug it off with a characteristic so-what?

In fact, the more we think about it the less we care. In fact, we can't remember when a European heavyweight champion amounted to anything in the fistic scale. Joe Beckett was an European champion and no more horizontal hombre ever stepped into an American ring. The suspicion was that Beckett had his trunks half soled. Fainting Phil Scott, a successor to Beckett's European title, shouted "foul!" so many times in American rings that the New York Commission finally adopted its no-foul rule.

Schmeling was probably the best of the European heavyweights despite the fact that he won Jack Sharkey's title while sitting down. Max was on the floor, holding his groin in a simulation of agony while the late Joe Jacobs, his manager, persuaded the judges that he had been hit low. It was the first time in heavyweight history that the title passed on a foul.

On his first trip to this country, Schmeling was hailed as the German Dempsey, and there was a remarkable resemblance between the Teuton and the old Manassa Mauler—both with their high cheek bones, dark brows and shallow black pompadours. Schmeling justified his press notices as a puncher when he knocked out Johnny Risko, the old trial horse whom the best heavyweights of the day couldn't stop.

But the first sign that Schmeling was a good fighter was given paradoxically, on the night that he lost his title to Sharkey in a return bout. That night in New York he stood up to Sharkey, outboxed him and outpunched him, but some astigmatized judges voted for the American at the end of the fifteenth round.

Just when it appeared that Schmeling had been given a dirty deal and was certain to win his way back to the title if given another chance, he tumbled into the fistic scrapheap with a horrible performance against Max Baer. At the time, Baer was a newcomer to big-time boxing, and Schmeling was punching him silly with left hands. But all of a sudden in the twelfth round, Schmeling seemed to stand stock still as Baer swung a long right hand from back stage and banged Schmeling on the chin. It was a blow any novice should have ducked, but Schmeling appeared transfixed. They counted the full ten over him.

It was the first sign that Schmeling was an in-and-outer. The next was the evening when he fought old Mickey Walker, an overstuffed welterweight. Schmeling knocked out Walker, but for most of the eight rounds, little Mickey's left hook was bouncing off Max's chin with regularity and Schmeling had no defense for it save his chin. With one desperate punch that actually turned Walker upside down, landing him against the corner of the ring on his head, Schmeling finally won the fight.

If that fight seemed to reestablish Schmeling, it was not for long. He managed to get himself licked by Steve Hamas, a heavyweight who was fresh out of college and never rated as much of a title threat. A bit later, Schmeling inveigled Hamas to go to Germany for a bout and there he knocked the Penn State boy out.

Because there was nobody else of any account around, Schmeling finally was matched with Joe Louis. It was before Louis won Jimmy Braddock's title, and that was just as well for Louis, because in the greatest fistic upset since Braddock beat Baer, Schmeling knocked Louis out. Schmeling thus did the heavyweight division a service for Louis was scaring all other challengers into hiding.

The fact is that his knockout victory over Louis was as great a surprise to Schmeling as it was to the fight public generally. Schmeling had no particular taste for the Louis bout. He came back to his own corner at the end of the first round, pale and uneasy. "Dot Louis hits hard," he remarked to his trainer, Max Machon. Schmeling was plain scared.

Machon was furious with Max. "You hit hard, too, Max," he told Schmeling. "You hit harder." With obvious misgivings Schmeling returned to the battle. To his credit he kept punching. In the fourth round one of his long rights sent Louis to the floor. That was the tonic Max needed. Three more times he bounced right hands off Louis' chin and floored him. In the twelfth he knocked a badly dazed Louis out.

Schmeling was the new fistic hero. His was a triumph of boxing and sharpshooting over Louis' two-handed attack. After Louis won Braddock's title, a re-match with Schmeling was a natural. Two years after he beat Louis, Schmeling again was in the ring with him. And what happened? Louis knocked him out in two minutes, that's what. When they rate the great in-and-outers of prize fighting, Schmeling will lead the list.

With CONSIDINE

Aboard the S. S. S. S. Matsonia-(by bottle)-Jan. 14.—We were 4,000 miles due west of Stillman's gymnasium and Jacobs Beach, and the sharp snout of this big white boat was cutting a short-lived furrow through the endless blue-green Pacific. But out of a room, deep in the belly of the ship, came some unmistakable sounds and odors.

CONSIDINE

"So I said to the bum, 'I'll smack yer brain out . . .' so we get the 25 per cent off the top, and blow, and the commission don't say a word . . . Yeah, but how can a bloke get a break when he don't know who to see around Mike Jacobs' office? . . . c'mon, Tony, two more minutes on the light bags, then we'll be through . . ." There was also the harsh whisper of boxing shoes rubbing against flooring, the rhythmic ratatatatat of the light bags and the muffled wheeze of the big bag. And the heavy aroma of liniment. And of men, stripped, at work.

Joe Herman, an ex-fighter now developing a comfortable middle-aged bulge, was supervising a workout in the ship's gym by two of his fighters, Tony Olivera, the San Franciscan Portuguese who claims the bantamweight title and swarthy Danny Laverne, a tough Puerto Rican featherweight. Joe had a dead cigar stuck in his kisser, the official badge of a manager.

They have three fights lined up in Honolulu, the feature of which is Olivera's match with Little Dado, the flyweight champion. The fights will mean only a paragraph or two in the big papers, but they are the very lives of these men, as well as the livelihood.

Their interest in the forthcoming matches blots everything out of their lives . . . This fabulous ocean included. Seeing them work, and being with them the past few days, gives us a new insight into the mechanism of fighting men, and makes us marvel anew over the indisputable fact that they have more sentimentality and humaneness than any other class of athletes. Being this little unsung band which lives by its fists and its wits made us regret the scores of little known fighters and managers we have dismissed in our time as bums.

Out on the sun-cleansed deck, after the workout, Olivera told us something about himself and showed us his scrapbook . . . You don't think of a fighter keeping a scrapbook, do you? Tony has two fat ones, with his comments written beside each glued-in clipping. Comments such as these:

"This boy Elwood Romero is just about the dirtiest fighter I've met. In the clinches. . .The house went mad. . ." "Boy, can you imagine a mother going 250 miles to see her son box? When I saw her there, I was sore for a while, but then I was glad to see her. Now I know how much she loves me". . . "Why do they do things like this to me? (This was next a clipping showing that he had fought a draw with one Young Jo Roche.) They must want me to kill my opponent, but I guess I'll keep on trying" . . . "Owen Hink is just plain grief to me. I split his mouth and knocked his teeth through his lip, but no dice I did not know what to do with the guy" . . . (After Romero knocked his down eight times in a round) . . . "Boy, I sure hope I don't go through this again". . ."My good friend, Horace Mann, butted me and stuck his thumb in my eye. I fought terrible in this one". . . (After he beat Sixto Escobar). . . "I won. I won. I am so happy. .I am floating in the air. I must have went crazy" . . . (Before beating Lou Salica) "The first time in my life I ever got so much publicity." . . . (After winning) "I am floating in the air. I am recognized as champion of

D. C. Sextet Now Leads By 2 Games

Norm Burns Tallies 2 Goals as Locals Lead Throughout; Take 4th Straight

By Jack Munhall

While a new all-time record attendance of 4,613 paying fans stomped their feet and jangled their bells, the Washington Eagles last night answered the Baltimore Orioles' threat to their Eastern Amateur League lead with a 6-2 victory at Riverside Stadium. The old attendance record was 4,086, set December 13, when last the Eagles and Orioles met locally.

Outclassed were the proud Orioles, who had won six and tied one of their last nine matches to cut the Eagles' season-long lead to two points; outclassed by perhaps the finest performance Washington has turned loose since the inception of organized ice hockey here last year. Baltimore's humiliation was witnessed by six bus loads of Monumental City fans.

With Norman Burns heading the Washington attack with two goals —in addition to one he made that was nullified by penalty—the Eagles dominated the match from start to finish and increased their first-place margin to two full games.

Started Slowly

Keyed to the hilt for this important encounter, Redvers MacKenzie's team toyed with the visitors for five minutes before pouring through the first of its three goals in the opening period, added one tally in the second and two in the third canto. Baltimore counted once in the second period, to trail, 3 to 1, and again in the final sesion, after Washington had run its advantage to 6 to 1.

For Washington the triumph was its fourth in succession and its twenty-first against only six setbacks and three ties. Their six goals extended the Eagles' great scoring streak to 27 for the last four matches.

Sharing offensive honors of the night with Burns were Paul Courteau, "Rory" Rosignol, Frank Mailley and Roy McBride, each of whom rippled the Orioles' net once.

The extraordinarily fast action began with the first face-off and at once the Eagles took command of the match, sending their forward lines crashing time after time against the Orioles' defense. It was inevitable that this offensive steamroller would break through, and midway of the period Washington clicked with the first of three goals.

Eagles Score Lacking Player

Oddly, it was when the Eagles were a player shy that they sent in their first point. With Rossignol in the penalty box for high sticking, Courteau entered the Washington line-up and on the face-off following Rossignol's penalty he scored. Two swift whacks of his stick as Referee Harwood dropped the puck netted Courteau his second such goal in two matches here.

About three minutes later, Burns, continuing the hot pace that finds him leading the league in goals and in total points, whammed in one of his high, hard specialties from 20 feet out on a pass from MacBeth, and at 15:50 the Eagles finished fashioning their 3-0 advantage.

Unrelenting was Washington's pace in the second period but a suddenly stiffened Baltimore defense enabled the Orioles to match single goals with the Eagles and maintain their three-point deficit at 4-1.

Only Washington goal of the session was Burns' second of the match, an example of the terrific power and accuracy of the league's best shot. Skating slowly alone into the Baltimore attacking zone, flanked by two Orioles and confronted by a third, Burns nevertheless tallied with ridiculous ease.

Baltimore scored first in the period, at 2:01, on a nicely worked play on which Ripley counted after trading two passes with Webster in much the same manner as a basketball team would set up a basket.

Arch Ward Rejects National League Commission Job

Chicago, Jan. 14 (AP).—Arch Ward, sports editor of the Chicago Tribune, revealed tonight that he had rejected an offer to become commissioner of the National Football League.

He did not say who represented the league, but stated the offer was made about ten days ago.

Duquesne Wins 8th Game in Row

Milwaukee, Jan. 14 (AP).—Duquesne's unbeaten basketball team, stopped cold during the first period, rebounded after the intermission to score its eighth straight victory tonight by defeating Marquette, 24 to 18.

Duquesne was unable to break into the scoring column for the first 12 minutes, and at the end of the first half trailed 11 to 4. Becker scored Duquesne's only basket during the first half, the other two points coming on free throws.

Dartmouth Job Is Accepted By McLaughry

Succeeds Blaik, Who Resigned to Take Over Army Coaching

By the Associated Press

Hanover, N. H., Jan. 14.—Announcement that De Ormand (Tuss) McLaughry had given up what was considered a lifetime berth at Brown University to succeed his intimate friend, Earl (Red) Blaik, as Dartmouth's head football coach was made today by Athletic Director William H. McCarter.

Although McCarter was overwhelmed with applicants when Blaik and his entire staff resigned on Christmas Day to return to West Point, McLaughry's eventual appointment had been taken for granted here. It was understood that Blaik urged the Dartmouth authorities to name his friend when he asked release from his contract.

"The decision I have made has been a most difficult one," McLaughry said on his arrival here.

"I spent 15 happy years at Brown and several weeks ago its athletic council offered to extend my contract for five more years. That gesture, coming unsolicited, made my decision even harder."

McLaughry, an exponent of superscientific football, including the

Roosevelt and Eastern Win Interhigh Games

Rough Riders Turn Back Tech, 38-33, and Central Bows to White Tide, 23-18; Ciango and Poston Star for Teams

Still intent on making this year's race for public school basketball laurels a photo finish, Roosevelt and Eastern High fives skinned through a couple of narrow openings yesterday despite stiff resistance.

Roosevelt's 1940 winners, playing on their home floor, racked up a 38-33 triumph over Tech in a see-saw contest, and the White Tide of Eastern nosed out Central, 23-18, at Lincoln Park. As a result the two victors, titlist and runner-up in series play last year, boast the only unbeaten marks in the league.

Tech Makes It Tough

Tech had been touted as one of the Rough Riders' prime foes this year, and it didn't disappoint yesterday. Never more than eight points was Roosevelt able to store up, seven times it saw the score knotted and twice the Manual Trainers took two-point leads.

There was no doubt which was the better team at the end, however, despite the fact Tech's Jackie Walsh proved far superior to Hymie Perlo, Rider ace, in what was expected to be a scoring duel. Walsh got only 2 points in the first half, but in the second rang up 13 for top honors of the game. Meanwhile, Perlo was being neatly shepherded by first Johnny Catloth and then

Vikings Put Up Fight

The White Tide encountered unexpected opposition from Central's tenacious Vikings before their smooth, longshot artists could ring up the winning basket over a club which had been soundly thrashed by Roosevelt last week.

It was a neck-and-neck affair in the first quarter with Eastern coming out with a bare two-point lead, 8 to 6.

Central's Sam DiBlasi and Lenny Citrenbaum led the losers' rally in the second quarter only to watch Eastern's aces ring up 5 more points

Sharpshooters Of G. W. Beat Clemson, 69-49

Colonials Get Away To 37-10 Lead at Half; Zunich, McNeil High

By the Associated Press

Clemson, S. C., Jan. 14.—George Washington's fast-breaking basketball team had no trouble tnoight rolling up a 27-point first-half lead and going on to defeat Clemson, 69-49.

Clemson jumped to a quick 4-point lead in the opening minute before Joe Comer, Matt Zunic and Roy McNeil found the range for the victors and from then on it was a run-away. Hitting from all ranges, the Colonials ran the count to 22-6 at the end of 12 minutes. The count stood at 37-10 in favor of G. W. at the half.

Clemson bounced back in the second half to make it interesting with Marion Craig dropping in field baskets from everywhere on the court, the Tigers proceeded to reduce George Washington's lead to 15 points midway the second half.

Sharpshooters Zunic, McNeil and Amendola contributed 38 of the Colonials points with some fancy shooting, Zunic and McNeil leading the nights point-getting with 13 each, while Amendola tallied 12.

Ohio Mentor Is Successor To Schmidt

State-Wide Drive to Make Him Grid Coach Succeeds; He Boasts A Brilliant Record

(Picture On Page 23.)

By the Associated Press

Columbus, Ohio, Jan. 14.—Paul Brown, who was too small to play with Ohio State University's freshman football team 13 years ago, today became the biggest gridiron figure on the Buckeye campus.

A "draft Brown" movement which started a couple of minutes after Francis Schmidt had resigned the head coaching job December 16 swept the Massillon High School miracle man into the vacant berth today as the athletic board and university trustees stamped him with their official okeh.

Never in the history of Buckeye athletics has a man received the State-wide support of fans, alumni and other coaches as did Brown, whose Massillon High teams lost only eight games in his nine years of scholastic mentorship. They lost only one game in the last 60 contests.

Unanimous Sanction

With practically everyone in Ohio on the Brown band-wagon, the athletic board's unanimous sanction today was a mere formality.

Brown, informed of his appointment while addressing a joint meeting of Columbus luncheon and sports clubs, declared:

"I am a very happy man. I have been running this football business on a basis of merit and right and wrong. I'll continue to run it that way, no matter where the chips may fall. I sty this is the expectation and conviction that I will receive the utmost cooperation from the university officials and the youngsters.

"I have made no commitments relative to my staff. That will take a lot of serious thought, but I expect to have my assistants lined up in about three weeks. But you may say this—the staff will be my own, of my own choosing. And I alone will answer for it."

First to Jump

The new Buckeye mentor, the first to jump straight from a high school job to the fifth largest university in the country, was not certain when he would take over his new chores. He will confer with Athletic Director L. W. St. John on that point.

Brown will get a one-year contract, with a three-year gentleman's agreement. The first year, it was understood, he will receive $6,500, with a $500 increase the second and third season. On top of that a summer school teaching session will add about $500 annually to his earnings.

Brown's appointment gives the Western Conference two head coaches from the town of Massillon (pop. 26,600). The other is Harry Stuhldreher, of Wisconsin, who was the smallest quarterback in Massillon High School history. Brown was the second smallest ever to play with that scholastic juggernaut.

Otis Douglas, Jr., Named at Akron U.

Akron, Ohio, Jan. 14 (AP).—Otis Douglas, jr., today was named Akron University's head football coach in successoin to the man who brought him here from William and Mary College two years ago. Douglas, 32, replaces Thomas A. (Spook) Dowler, flashy Colgate back of 1929-31, who resigned last Friday by request.

Douglas was a tackle at the Williamsburg, Va., college and later joined its caoching staff. He was an assistant to Dowler there for four years until both came to Akron. Douglas acted as line coach.

Western Bows to George Washington High in Thriller, 30-29

Victors Score But 1 Point in Last Period

Foul Shot in Final Minutes Settles Hot Battle at Alexandria; Clift Top Scorer

Special Dispatch to The Post

Alexandria, Jan. 14.—Western High School cagers restricted George Washington High to a single point in the fourth quarter of a hotly contested game here today, but that single point turned out to be the margin of victory as the Presidents checked a late rally by the opposition to turn back the Red Raiders, 30-29.

Western, after leading throughout the first half, went into the last quarter on the short end of a 29-23 score, and with Karas and Mitchell setting the pace, gradually began to overhaul the winners. With George Washington's attack stymied by a tight Western defense, the visitors narrowed the gap to 29-27 with 1½ minutes to go, when Leon Chisolm was fouled at midcourt and converted the charity attempt for the deciding point.

The Red Raiders battled valiantly to overcome the three-point margin with less than a minute to play, but the Presidents held them off until all but 10 seconds of the game had elapsed, and Cross tipped in a field goal from under the basket during a scramble for the ball.

Amos Clift, George Washington's 6-foot 3-inch-center, topped the scorers with five field goals and a foul shot for 11 points, while Chisolm, of the winners, and Karas, of Western, shared runner-up honors with 10 apiece.

Reserves Score Often In 2d Half; Terps Near Perfect on Foul Line

By the Associated Press

Lexington, Va., Jan. 14.—Washington and Lee's basketball team showed varying streaks of brilliance here tonight to defeat Maryland, 59 to 41, in a Southern Conference game.

Coach Cookie Cunnnigham gave his regulars plenty of relief during the evening, but Reserves Jeff Hudson, soph center, and Rookie Johnny Ligon, sub guard, enjoyed scoring sprees of 16 and 12 points, respectively.

After several cautious early minutes, in which the lead changed hands five times, Hudson, who replaced Capt. Howard Dobbins, warmed up to the race with two baskets and the lead was extended to 33 to 19 at half-time for the Generals.

The reserves showed a tight defense in the second half and it was 7 minutes before Gene Ochsenreiter, Terrapin forward, dropped in one of his half-dozen field goals. The Old Liners, however, were no match for W. and L. and the lead continued to pile up until late in the game when the tilt became rowdy with reserves on both sides playing raggedly.

Dick Pinck, W. and L.'s chief gunner, bagged 11 points in the first half and added 4 more in the few minutes he played in the second period.

Ozark Hill Billy Boasts of Ability To Out-Talk Rivals

By the Associated Press

Kansas City, Jan. 14. — Leonard Dodson, winner of the playoff for the Oakland golf title, will play you $5 a hole, with the Ozark chatterbox making every blow standing on one foot and using only one arm.

He will follow that by "sitting out" a round, swinging through the entire 18 holes from a low-backed rocker—blindfolded, if you wish, and interrupting the match long enough at the ninth to play checkers for any purse you care to name. Or he will wager every banknote in his canary yellow slacks that he can tour any par 70 course selected in 68.

These antics haven't made Dodson rich, but he wins enough to take annual trips down golfdom's winter paths of gold. Ever since 1936 he has pushed his 132 pounds and his eye-blinding sweaters into championship pictures by winning play-offs.

Last summer he won $100 by taking a novice and producing an 85-shooter in three months, then lost it to the pupil the very next day when a short putt curled wrong.

Next to his golf and betting Dodson is known for his vocal ability.

"Down in the Ozarks where I come from we have no golf ethics and if you don't try to talk your opponent into missing that 5-foot putt you are either crazy or you aren't an Ozark hillbilly."

Dodson once used his chatter against another Ozark product, Horton Smith. The two had tied for the first prize in the Hollywood, Fla., Open and the next day Dodson suggested they play for the combined prize—winner take all.

Smith refused—saving second-place money for himself.

Denton, Thurnblad Score in World's 3-Cushion Tourney

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Jan. 14.—Two former champions, Tiff Denton, of Kansas City, and Art Thurnblad, of Kenosha, Wis., and a wo-time runner-up, Allen Hall, of Chicago, made victorious debuts today in the three-cushion billiards tournament for the world's championship.

Thurnbald had a terrific struggle with tenacious Joe Moriarty, of Chicago, finally winning in 78 innings, 50 to 46. They were tied at 8-all at the end of 18 innings, then the former champion fell behind but later rallied to squeeze by with a triumph in his first start of the month-long event.

Denton disposed of Herb Peterson, of St. Louis, son of Charley, the famous trick shot veteran, 50 to 33, in 59 innings.

Hall's victim was Irving Crane, of Rochester, N. Y., pocket billiards star, 50 to 39, in 64 innings. Hall built up a big lead early and breezed to a decisive triumph.

Willie Hoppe, defending champion, is still in the hospital recovering from a slight attack of pneumonia. To allow him to defend his title, his tournament bow has been postponed until the latter part of next week.

John Fitzpatrick, of Los Angeles, Pacific Coast champion, upset Art Rubin, of New York, tonight, winning by 50 to 47 in 60 innings.

Rubin had a high run of 10 points, best of the tourney so far. Fitzpatrick established a 48-to-42 margin late in the match, but Rubin held on grimly and cut this margin to two points before the coast entrant ended the tussle.

N. Y. Stands Pat On Conn as Ruler Of 175-Pounders

By the United Press

New York, Jan. 14.—The New York State Athletic Commission, ignoring the National Boxing Association sanctioned light-heavyweight title fight last night in Cleveland, today reaffirmed its recognition of Billy Conn as ruler of the 175-pounders.

This stand leaves the division with two champions since the young Greek, Anton Christoforidis, gained N. B. A. recognition by winning a unanimous decision over former titleholder Melio Bettina of Beacon, N. Y., over the 15-round route in Cleveland.

"We will continue to recognize Conn in this State," Chairman John J. Phelan announced after the commission meeting today. "He has not relinquished the title and has expressed willingness to meet any challenger designated by the commission."

Promoter Mike Jacobs, scoffing at the championship claims of Christoforidis, said he would go through with his plans for the Tommy Tucker-Jimmy Webb fight in Madison Square Garden February 27, and then pair the winner with Gus Lesnevich to determine the outstanding challenger for the title.

Gibson Grays Defeat G. A. O. Quintet, 30-19

Using almost three full teams, Bethesda-Chevy Chase High basketers took the measure of Fairfax last night in Bethesda, 36-19.

Bob Cremins proved the scoring star of the game with 13 points, and Bob Lebling kicked in with 7 for the winners.

In taking their sixth victory of the season, the Barons were never headed. Aat halftime they were out front, 23-10.

Basketball forces of Washington-Lee High, of Arlington, took their fifth decision of the season yesterday when they romped over a smaller and less experienced Mount Rainier five, 42-22.

Coolidge Wins, 19-12, Over Anacostia

City's Newest Court Team Beats Veteran Basketball Organization

Regrets that their team is not entered in interhigh competition was occasioned in the minds of Calvin Coolidge High court fans yesterday when the city's newest cage club turned back Anacostia, a "veteran" of three years' action, 19-12, on the Coolidge floor.

Coach Julian Colangelo, C. C. mentor, thus was credited with a defeat of the team he led last season.

In taking their third straight triumph in their first year of play, Coolidge's courtmen managed to outscrap a club that has gained recognition as the city's fiercest set of battlers. Their victory resulted as much from the perfect job of guarding Elmer Leukhardt, Indian star, by young Richard Waterman as William Penn's scoring spree which netted nine points.

Waterman managed for only two points himself, but he held Leukhardt to a mere four instead of the 12 to 15 he has averaged in games to date.

Anacostia held leads of 5-2 and 8-6 after the first two periods, but then Coolidge started to click. It jumped into a 14-11 edge going into the final session and increased it safely.

1940 Losses Prove No Barrier To Browns' Hopes

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Jan. 14 (AP).—While 1940 was the best in recent years from the point of attendance and receipts, stockholders of the St. Louis Browns were told today the season's income was insufficient to meet the team's operating expenses.

President Donald L. Barnes reported at the annual meeting that the outlook for the coming campaign, however, was "most encouraging."

He promised that the management would "vigorously" pursue its policy of acquiring additional playing strength and would continue the development of its farm system.

The Vikings gave Eastern many opportunities to score by their tussling and occasional fouling and the Ramblers obliged by sinking most of their foul shots.

Coming out after the first half Central made an exciting rally by tying the score, 14-14, with Citrenbaum making the telling basket. It was almost a strongest-man-wins affair when the boys continued to pile up over the ball.

Eastern forged ahead again in the latter part of the third quarter, emerging with a 3-point lead over the persistent Centralites.

The Ramblers came back in the last quarter with a sizzling attack which the Vikings were unable to stop.

Highest scoring player of the match was Ritchie Poston with eight points. He was trailed by Moe Schulman with seven. Leading Central's scorers was Citrenbaum, tallying six points for the losers.

Woman Steals Mixed Bowling Meet Show

Catherine Mertz's Library of Congress Score High for Night

Catherine Mertz, Pirates, was the whole show in the Library of Congress mixed meet at Brookland last night. Miss Mertz rolled high game for the women, 132, and a 361 set, adding 1 pin to the former game record and 30 sticks to the set high. Incidentally, she came within 14 pins of tying the men's high game record and only 2 lone sticks from egaling the men's high set. The Redskins and Cardinals divided team honors, the first with a 526 game and the latter rolling a 1,518 set.

Ollie Smith, Team No. 11, of The Washington Post loop, rolling at Convention Hall, was the best man on the drives, his 135 high game leading to a season record set of 394.

The No. 12 team took high game with 544 pins, while 1,595 sticks earned the set for the No. 11 lads, including the odd game from No. 12. The leading No. 1 team lost all three to Team No. 2, thus causing a three-way tie for the top spot, with No. 11 in front by pinfall and Nos. 12 and 1 following.

E. J. Payne, anchor man of the team bearing his name, and Acton, May Hardware, were the shining lights in the Electrical meet at Takoma Recreation with the former rolling high game of 155 as the latter took a 384 count to win the big set. The E. J. Payne team, paced by their boss' high game, won the high game with a 602 while 1,678 pins garnered set laurels for E. B. Adams. May Hardware, with Acton's aid, won all three contests from Redman & Brown. Camac Appliance leads with Noland Co. and Western Electric tied for second.

Ethelane Brooks, Mountaineers, was the high game roller in the Railroad Retirement Board ladies' meet at Arcadia, her 122 being top count. Sadie Glanz, Red Arrow, took the set with a 309 count, leading her team to highs of 475-1,366.

Jim (Shoes) Boteler, IBM No. 2, was top man in the Office Appliance meet at the Ice Palace with a 143 game and 370 set, leading his quintet to highs of 585-1638. IBM No. 2 still leads with Royal No. 1 and A. B. Dick tied for second. L. B. Smith took all three from Royal No. 2.

The two Lutheran Church loops rolled at Arcadia with Ed Strawser, Luther Place No. 1, leading with a 147 game which led up to a 404 set, his second consecutive 400 total. The Grace team won the high game with 600 as Luther Place No. 1 came in for the set with 1,685. For the women, Elizabeth Nash, Reformation, took game with 124 as Laura George, Trinity No. 1, paced her girls to team highs of 483-1398 with her own high set of 317.

Referee Bortnick Returns Tomorrow To Wrestling Wars

Benny Bortnick, the referee who holds the record as the most hissed official in the history of Turner's Arena, will brave the ire of the mob again Thursday night on the card featuring Milo Steinborn versus Ernie Dusek.

Benny has been missing from the local rassle scene for some six months because of doctors' orders. It seems that Benny had a number of bruises about his person inflicted by outraged groan artists.

The "watermelon king" is quite recovered, however, and will be back with renewed determination to crack down on the villains of the ring, Promoter Joe Turner announced. Benny's greatest thrill as an official came when he was tossed into Row C by Chris Zaharias, a little jaunt which resulted in the loss of five teeth. Tomorrow night's card brings back "The Green Hornet," masked groan artist.

Roosevelt Beats Tech High, 38-33

Charley Ellis, a pair of first-year men, who limited him to 6 points.

It was a ghost-like little 130-pounder, Frankie Ciango, who provided Roosevelt a margin in its second series triumph of the season. Like an elusive shadow he shook away from his man time and again to tally from directly under the rim. He managed for a total of 13 points.

By the end of the first period Roosevelt held a 9-6 edge and largely through Ciango's efforts it was 14-8 at half-time. Tech's only counter in the second quarter went to Walsh as his mates missed three foul tosses and somewhere in the vicinity of 30 shots from the floor.

Finally Tech got going. With the count at 16-11 early in the third stanza, Walsh, "Shrimp" Brewer (a 6-footer), and Phil Gentlescore went to work to tie it at 16-16. Another shot by Walsh, of the circus variety, soon afterward gave the Trainers their first lead. The end of the period, however, found Roosevelt again on top, 24-23.

Deadlocking things at 25-up was the best the losers could do after that. At one point they trailed by 35-27, but came back slightly on points by Walsh and Catloth.

A surprise package turned up in the Rider line-up, which was fortunate in view of Perlo's ineffectiveness. That was lanky Charley Howard, center. When his mates needed points most in the second half he kicked in with eight, four from the foul stripe.

Gonzaga Takes 6th Victory Of Season

Devitt Beaten, 34-19, As F. Counsilman Scores 17 Points

A beating by Central High several weeks ago remained the only stain on Gonzaga High's basketball record yesterday on its home floor as the Purple swept to its sixth victory of the season, a 34-19 margin over Devitt.

Winner of its last two outings over schoolboy foes, Devitt was never able to seriously threaten the Purple. It hung on well throughout the first two stanzas, trailing by 9-6 and 15-13, respectively, but in the third session sagged to a 21-14 deficit. From that on there was no doubt of the outcome.

Franny Counsilman's 17 points was far and away the best scoring performance of the day, but he was assisted nobly by All-Metropolitan Star Bob Mulvihill. The latter had 9 points.

Oliver's Draft Call Postponed

Wilmington, Del., Jan. 14 (AP).—Big Ed Oliver headed back to the golf wars today after his local Draft Board placed him on the replacement list.

It means that the 24-year-old professional will not be called immediately for a year's military training. The Draft Board chairman said the replacement group wouldn't be called for at least two or three weeks. The golfer stands eleventh on the list.

Oliver left the recent Oakland, Calif., tournament at the tenth tee when he was notified to report within five days to his home Draft Board.

When he arrived home, Oliver found another notice that he was on the reserve list. He appeared before the board, anyway, and got permission to join other professionals in their annual winter tour.

Clem Stralka Signs Contract With Redskins

Former Georgetown Star Is All Set for His Fourth Season

Clem Stralka, 210-pound Redskin guard who captained the Georgetown University eleven in 1937, yesterday signed his 1941 contract, Jack Espey, general manager, announced last night.

Stralka, otherwise known as "Little Bull," is the seventh veteran to sign for the coming season. He will be playing his fourth year with the Redskins.

The 5-foot-9½ lineman who was such a bulwark on defense in the second and fourth period line last year has been visiting his parents in Ashley, Pa., since the 1940 season ended, but he plans to make his home in Washington.

Dick Farman, Vic Carroll, Micky Parks, Frank Filchock, Bill Young, and Clyde Shugart already have signed their 1941 contracts.

Brown End Coach Joins Harvard Staff In Same Capacity

By the United Press

Boston, Jan. 14.—Earl M. Brown, jr., Brown University end coach and former All-America end at Notre Dame in 1938, will accept a similar berth at Harvard, it was reported unofficially tonight.

William J. Bingham, Harvard athletic director, declined to confirm the report, but said "Brown is one of several men we are considering for the post."

Brown joined the Brown University staff in 1939, coaching football wingmen and the freshman basketball team that won eight games and lost four.

If appointed, he would replace Wes Fesler, former All-America end at Ohio State who resigned to accept the head coach berth at Wesleyan. Fesler replaced Jack Blott, resigned.

Pitching McCarthy's Only Worry

Manager of Yankees Says He'll Have His Boys Back on Top

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 14.—Despite what the loss of the world championship has done toward overhauling and taking the carbon knocks out of Joe McCarthy's digestive system, the manager of the Yankees is planning deliberately to drive his boys back to the top in 1941.

This can mean only that McCarthy is a slave to duty. Ordinarily at this time of year Joe's eyes have a slightly glazed look and his breath comes in gasps after having spent a couple of months on the "banquet circuit," tearing through the rubber chicken and the hip steaks.

"Last year was just one of those things," Joe said sunnily, clasping his hands across a stomach that didn't register an ache or a pain. "The breaks went against us all the way."

Joe said the only worry he would have when the Yanks pitch camp at St. Petersburg next month would be his pitching. Otherwise he figures the club has an abundance of fine material.

JOE McCARTHY

He hasn't fully decided how he will use the sensational young second-base combination of Phil Rizzuto and Gerald Priddy from Kansas City.

"My first inclination is to keep a pair like that together," he mused. "Still, I have a mighty fine second baseman in Joe Gordon, and it's good to have a man like him in there to steady a youngster like Rizzuto . . . I might shift Gordon to third. But shucks, why worry about that now? Rizzuto has to show me he can play shortstop better than Frankie Crosetti, and how can you count a guy like Red Rolfe out at third? We'll see."

In the meantime, Joe is inclined to think Cleveland will be a little tougher to beat than Detroit over the long haul in hte coming campaign.

"I think the Indians have helped themselves some with their trades. They are young, will stand up over the route and overpower the weaker clubs. Especially when that kid Feller is pitching."

Georgetown Five Opens 'Suicide Schedule' at Army Today

N. Y. U. Next For Hoyas At Riverside

Maryland Winds Up Week's Activities for G. U. Friday Night At College Park

"The greatest of all Georgetown basketball teams" today plunges into a stretch of three games which probably will prove its right to the praise it has drawn for a six-game winning streak, topped off by an upset of George Washington. The Hoyas open a "suicide schedule" by playing Army at West Point today, continue by plaing nost to powerful N. Y. U. at Riverside Stadium tomorrow night, and finish up in a battle with Maryland at College Park Friday night.

Of the three, the tussle with N. Y. U. always formidable Violets, appears most difficult for Georgetown, but beating Army at West Point is never easy and when the Hoyas run into traditional rival Maryland they're liable to have their tongues hanging out.

While Georgetown attempts to cement its claim to being the District's outstanding team George Washington hopes to continue to revive at the expense of Southern Conference competition. After playing Clemson last night, the Colonials were to invade Furman tonight, and conclude their four-game road trip against Army at West Point Thursday.

Maryland, off on a two-day tour of Southern Conference points, played Washington & Lee last night, and was to end its brief trip in a game with V. M. I. tonight. The Terps then plan to take advantage of a two-day rest while awaiting the onslaught of Georgetown.

Walker, Navy Athletic Star, To Get Sword

Academy to Honor Midshipman for His Sports Excellence

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Jan. 14.—The Navy Athletic Association sword will be presented to Midshipman Theodore T. Walker, a senior of Fort Mitchell, Ky., for personal excellence in academy athletics, Capt. F. A. L. Vossler, acting academy superintendent, announced today.

Capt. Vossler also said Midshipman Harold A. Harwood, a junior, of Los Angeles, Calif. would receive the Thompson Trophy Cup for his promotion of academy athletics.

Walker captained the undefeated 1940 cross-country team and placed first in every meet. He has been outstanding in both track and cross country and has been awarded an "N-star" in both these sports.

Harwood was captain of the second Navy football eleven and has won an "N-star" twice in this sport and once in baseball. He is ineligible for gridiron competition next season because he has played three years of varsity football.

Walker will receive the Navy sword at the presentation of prizes and awards ceremony February 6. The Thompson Cup will be presented to Harwood at a similar ceremony in June.

Whichcee Injured, To Get Winter Off

Los Angeles, Jan. 14 (AP).—Trainer Darrell Cannon said today he was taking Whichcee, sensational pacesetter of the 1939 and 1940 runnings of the Santa Anita Handicap, out of training for the rest of the winter because of a "filled" leg.

The injured leg, the right front, is swollen and the ailment is akin to suspensory ligament trouble such as Seabiscuit had before he made his comeback. The trouble with Whichcee's leg developed last week and forced him from Saturday's San Pasqual Handicap.

Whichcee finished second in the 1939 handicap and was third behind Seabiscuit and Kayak II last year. He was quoted at 20 to 1 in the Agua Caliente future books for this year's "hundred grander."

Lacquer Lady, Famed as Jumping Mare, Dies at 10 After Hunting Accident

Lacquer Lady, Fenton Fadeley Up

Fenton Fadeley's 'Finest Jumping Mare in East,' Thoroughbred Daughter Of Crusader, Had Won Scores of Titles

By Anne Hagner

Lacquer Lady, frequently termed "the finest jumping mare in the East" by experts, died yesterday afternoon at the Bethesda (Md.) stable of Fenton M. Fadeley, ending a brilliant career as the result of a hunting accident on January 4.

Out with the Potomac hounds for what was intended to be her last fox chase, Lacquer Lady was ridden by Fadeley's young son, Mercer, home from school for the holidays and eager to ride his father's favorite mare. During the run she pulled her stifle joint and was returned to the Fadeley barn on Wilson Lane where complications set in.

The January 4 outing was to have marked the end of cross-country gallops and the beginning of her return to the show ring after a long layoff. Fadeley was pointing her for the President's Birthday Horse Show at Fort Myer next week.

Lacquer Lady, a 10-year-old thoroughbred daughter of Crusader, came into Fadeley's hands six years ago when he purchased her from Mrs. Andrew J. (Cy) Cummings, wife of the late president of the Laurel race track.

Started as Flat Racer

Up to the time she was a 4-year-old, Lacquer Lady had a spotty career on the track at Laurel and later, under Mrs. Cummings' ownership, at small local affairs. She was scrawny and undernourished in those days, but Mrs. Cummings saw that she might have jumping possibilities and had Donald Bradley school her over a few low fences in Rock Creek Park. Six weeks after this debut, Bradley sent her over the entire Inter-American Horse Show course at Meadowbrook, backward and forward.

According to Bradley, she had only spring and very little finesse at this point. From her racing, she was highly nervous and quivered at the slightest excitement. When her bridle was changed from a sharp pelham to an ordinary snaffle with a martingale, she calmed down considerably and began real development.

Dam of Lacquer Lad

After she joined the Fadeley show string, Lacquer Lady became the local wonder horse. She was shown all over the East, including a myriad number of shows in the immediate vicinity, and won championships and major awards on every side. Whether she appeared in hunter or jumper classes, the game little mare turned in the same smooth, workmanlike performances that placed her on top in the regard of practically every horse lover who knew her.

Strenuous campaigning and a severe fall at Fort Myer several years ago combined to knock her out of top shape, so Fadeley wisely decided to temporarily retire her. In the interim she was bred to Fred J. Hughes' stallion, Saint Rock, and three years ago produced a small chestnut colt, Lacquer Lad.

Before the youngster was weaned, his dam was back at the shows, winning in her accustomed fashion, while her son was entered in colt classes. Not long afterward, however, her legs went bad and she was again retired, this time to effect a cure.

Whenever she emerged from her layoffs to return to the ring, it was always with a vengeance. Twice she jumped off at 6 feet with Margaret Cotter's Rocksie, once in the Columbus Horse Show and again at Warrenton in 1939. Her gallantry made her a legend among the railhangers, many of whom labeled her the greatest jumper they had ever seen.

Wilson Owls, Shenandoah Meet Tonight

Teachers Play Host To Mountaineers In Tech High Gym

The Wilson Teachers College Owls, enthused over their 45-to-26 rout of the Randolph-Macon Yellowjackets Monday night, will engage the Mountaineers of Shenandoah College tonight in Tech's gymnasium at 8 o'clock.

This will be the second of four home tilts in six days.

Coach "Doc" Wilson said that little Charley Clark, sensation of the 1940-41 edition of the Teachers, would be very much in evidence against the Virginia quint.

Clark alone tallied 18 points against Randolph-Macon and figured prominently in all of the Owls' other three triumphs.

Hal Ishin will start at forward while Ralph Battaglini and Ernie Cole will be in the opening line-up at center. Clark and Ray Holben will be in the guard positions.

Tomorrow night the Owls will meet the Maryland State Normal basketball squad on the Wilson Teachers floor on Harvard Street, between Eleventh and Thirteenth.

Whirlaway Is Rated Top 2-Year-Old

Racing Official Gives Colt 3-Pound Edge Over 1940 Leaders

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 14.—Whirlaway, Warren Wright's stretch-running colt, was three pounds better than any two-year-old of 1940, John B. Campbell, veteran racing secretary of all New York tracks, said today in his "Experimental Handicap," in which he annually rates the preceding year's juveniles.

If he were handicapping all the 1940 two-year-olds for a race now, Campbell would put 126 up on the Wright Kentucky Derby hopeful, according to the "Experimental" weights. At the same time, he would couple Royce G. Martin's Our Boots, three-time conqueror of Whirlaway, in second place with Alfred Vanderbilt's New World, each at 123 pounds. Whirlaway now is in Florida, training for stakes there.

Although issued for several years, the "Experimental" weights meant nothing more than Campbell's personal opinion until a year ago, when Jamaica made a $5,000-added event out of the idea. Most of the top 1939 juveniles passed the race up, however.

In this year's list, Campbell rated the leading 1940 juveniles, who have just turned three-year-olds and most of whom are eligible for the Derby, as follows:

Horse and Owner.	Weight.
Whirlaway, Warren Wright	126
Our Boots, Royce G. Martin	123
New World, Alfred G. Vanderbilt	123
Attention, Mrs. Parker Corning	122
King Cole, Ogden Phipps	122
Bold Irishman, Wm. Woodward	122
Level Best, Crispin Oglebay	121
Swain, Cleaveland Putnam	120
Blue Pair, C. C. Van Meter	118
Bushwhacker, R. W. McIlvain	118

St. Francis Five Beats C. U., 46 to 27

Cardinals Outclassed By Speedier Quintet; Frosh Lose to Terps

Catholic University lost its fourth straight basketball game last night, leaving Coach Fod Cotton a very sad character.

The Cardinals went down to defeat before a speedy band of dribblers from St. Francis College, of Loretto, Pa., 46 to 27—all of which prompted Cotton to say that he had never seen his boys in such poor form.

Only for five minutes did the Redbirds battle St. Francis on even terms. At the end of the first few minutes the score was 2-2, but after that the Cards were never in the game.

The visitors, unveiling a flashy passing attack which baffled the inexperienced Cardinal team, pulled away to a 21-9 lead at half time and steadily increased their advantage in the second half.

It was the passing work of Jimmy Staken, a razzle-dazzle running forward, which accounted for so many of St. Francis' points from under the goal, but it was Harry Felty, elongated St. Francis center, who stole the show.

He dominated the scoring with 19 points, piled up by shots from all over the floor. Catholic University's high-scoring sophomore, Jimmy Mulvihill, from St. John's, was bottled up completely in the first half and could only sink three goals from the floor in the second half.

C. U. story of sadness lay largely in their inaccurateness from the floor and a fatal fascination for freezing to the ball. They could sink only three out of 14 foul shots.

It was a night of double trouble for the Redbirds, who had lost to Duke, Navy and Mount St. Mary's for in a preliminary, Maryland's freshman five rolled over the Cardinal frosh, 48 to 37.

The Redbirds meet Western Maryland tomorrow night at Brookland gymnasium in a Mason-Dixon Conference game.

McLaughry Named Dartmouth Coach

tricky double wingback formations saw his Brown teams win 76 games, lose 58 and tie 5, the last deadlock being with Columbia in the 1940 finale. His first Bruins, back in 1926, were the famed 11 ironmen who made gridiron history by piling up nine straight wins, including triumphs over Dartmouth, Harvard and Yale, and tying Colgate without a single substitution.

During the last season, Brown won six of its ten games. But its previous records were not impressive, due to lack of material and injuries to key players. McLaughry's last great coaching success was priming the Eastern Collegiate All-Stars for an impressive victory over the New York Pro Giants last summer.

When McLaughry takes over here, he will find his youngest son, Bob, now a freshman, as one outstanding backfield candidate. At Brown, during 1937-1939, "Tuss" developed another son, John, now with the Giants, into one of the East's greatest blocking and punters.

McLaughry started his coaching career at Westminster College, New Wilmington, Pa., his alma mater, and before going to Brown, met with outstanding success at Amherst. Several times he has rejected tempting offers from major colleges, including one from Princeton. He is rated as noe of the highest paid coaches in the East and he ranks so high with his colleagues that he has held high offices in the Coaches' Association.

'Hammering Hank' Confident Of Victory Over Zivic Friday

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

"See you Friday," says Fritzie Zivic (left) as he met Henry Armstrong yesterday as they met in the New York Boxing Commission office. Armstrong will try then to regain the world welterweight championship

Armstrong Will Tackle Man Who Beat Him For Title With a Different Set of Tactics

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 14.—Henry Armstrong is dead certain he's going to prove Friday night, in what may be the last fight of his career, that you can teach an old dog new tricks.

He's getting ready to go against Fritzie Zivic in Madison Square Garden and for the first time in his fistic life he actually is thinking about defense.

His eyes, which were punched shut by Zivic when Henry was dethroned as welterweight champion last October, are completely healed again. Three physicians reported that much to the State athletic commission today.

He's Out to Regain Title

Now the gallant little Negro, who realizes better than anyone that he's not far from the end of the trail, is out to win back the last of the three titles he once held simultaneously, and he's so full of the idea that he even has consented to change his style. He no longer uses the riproaring pour-in-and-take-two-punches-to-deliver-one style which has made him the fight fan's favorite for years.

"I underestimated Zivic's fighting ability the last time," he explained today. "Now I realize that his experience and will to win make him dangerous at all times.

"As a result, I have changed my style to help my defense somewhat. I'm standing up a little straighter in my workouts for Friday's fight. Now, don't get the idea that I'm changing to a boxer, because you all know I can't fight any other way but just go in there and fight. But Eddie Mead (his manager) and myself realized we had to do something to fit Fritzie's style. By standing up a little more, I can box better. In fact, I've found it helps both my boxing and my fighting."

May Be His Last Fight

"The Hammer" has hinted several times recently that 1941 is likely to be his last in the business of mashing noses. Today he added that his chief ambition is to bow out as champion, "not as just another fighter," and that if he takes the crown off Fritzie's head Friday, he may exit right there.

As a result of this mental attitude, plus the fact he has worked harder for this fight than for any other in over a year, the gambling men along the West Forty-ninth Street betting mart went so far today as to install Henry favorite at odds of 5 to 7 to regain the 147-pound bauble. They did this despite the fact he was a soundly beaten warrior in the last meeting.

United Types Extended in Cage Tourney

Favorites Barely Beat Census Bureau, 43-39 In Recreation Play

United Typewriters ran into unexpected difficulty yesterday as the D. C. Recreation Department Basketball Tournament continued on four local courts in the men's division and at Central High in the girls section.

The perennially powerful Typewriters were forced to hang on desperately to take a 43-39 victory over Census Bureau in one of the closest matches of the day at Tech gym. Ollie Tipton poured 16 points through the cords to lead scoring.

Other battles at McKinley went to F. B. I. over Maritime Commission, 37-22, and Delaware and Hudson over St. Martin's, 17-13. Encounters at Eastern High saw the Silents A. A. defeat Eckington, 48-18; Air Duct beat Census Farmers, 30-25, and Census Ranchers bow to National Baptist Memorial, 30-18. In clashes at Roosevelt High the Sons of Pericles tripped the Finnish American five, 18-11; Capital City A. Z. A. beat the Harvesters, 22-16, and Bliss Electric trounced Labor Department, 22-10.

Boys games at Central went to Communications, 22-21, over Retirement; Accounts and Maintenance over Information and Recruiting, 20-17, and Statistical over Service Records, 30-23. In girls action FBI trampled Census, 35-14, and Treasury swamped Chesapeake & Potomac, 41-16.

Today's games call for meetings at Roosevelt of FBI and Calvary Methodist at 7:30; Naiman Photo and Retail Clerks at 8:30, and Sixth Presbyterian and Wallace Memorial at 9:30. The 7:30 clash at Central will be G. A. S. I. vs. Scotts Club; the 8:30 game brings together Royal Typewriters and Weather Bureau, and the 9:30 engagement will be Postoffice vs. Shannon & Luchs.

Aerial Bomb, Paying 5-1, Wins Feature Purse at Hialeah

Sassy Lady Beaten Out By Unerring

Jockey Connolly Is Injured in Spill After Suffering From Weight Reducing

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 14.—Aerial Bomb, a mare that was claimed for $1,600 in Detroit last September, today provided more evidence that racing condition sometimes offsets a lack of class when she defeated some highly regarded fillies and mares in the Star Island Purse of six furlongs. Mrs. H. Torriente's colorbearer held on better than usual to win by a half-length at 5 to 1, being clocked in the smart time of 1:11 2-5. M. N. Gonzalez was in the saddle.

Herbert M. Woolf's Unerring, a veteran of numerous stakes battles, ran a good race for her first attempt of the winter, finishing second by a length over Mrs. J. Simon Healy's Sassy Lady.

Little Pisk, one of the country's leading female equines, was a bang-up fourth in her 1941 debut. Favorite in the field of 10, the Calumet filly lacked her usual early foot but closed fast in run. It was the consensus of opinion that she will not be beaten by those she trailed today the next time they hook up.

As expected, Aerial Bomb set the pace, opening up a wide lead in front of Sassy Lady and Unerring. The latter challenged in threatening fashion after the field passed the final furlong pole and was rapidly wearing down the leader in the closing strides. Little Risk found her racing legs too late. She just missed catching Sassy Lady for third position.

Jockey Suffers From Making Weight

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 14.—Eddie Connolly, an apprentice boy from Manchester, N. H., worked hard here this morning so that he could make the weight limit to ride Starlike in the seventh race and Frances Keene in the eighth. Both horses were weighted at 97 pounds and Connolly was just able to make the overweight limit of five pounds. Net result: Starlike threw the boy, who was reported to have suffered several fractured ribs. With Connolly in the hospital, Tiny Conn McCreary substituted for the unlucky Connolly on Frances Keene in the final event. Frances Keene won the race by a nose and paid $94.60. Maybe Connolly shouldn't have tried to make the weight.

POSTERITY was in tight quarters the final sixteenth mile. MERRILY SAN stole through on the inside entering the stretch and finished gamely.

BURNING DECK, going in nearest pursuit of the leader from the start, closed courageously when the final test came and got up in the last strides. RED BURR saved ground and closed fast in the last 3 furlongs.

PROUD ONE, showing keen speed, raced BLUE TWINK into submission the first 6 furlongs, and continued with determination through the stretch to outlast LLANERO. The latter, outrun until straightened into the stretch, weaved his way through between the leaders and finished strong. KANSAS CITY, under a drive all the way, wore BLUE TWINK down in the last stride. The latter weakened the last furlong as if short.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,500; allowances. For 4-year-olds and upward, fillies and mares. The Star Island. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:33½. Off 4:34. Winner, Mrs. H. AERIAL BOMB broke in a tangle, moved into contention swiftly in the opening quarter mile, drew out into a long lead rounding the turn, but faltered and just lasted. UNERRING, going forwardly throughout, gained steadily through the stretch and was wearing the winner down. SASSY LADY, closest in pursuit of the leader early, held on well to outlast LITTLE RISK. The latter, permitted to drop out of contention in the early stages, finished with a belated rush.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROYAL ROBES, $4.70, $4.20, $3.00; SHAUN G., $10.70, $6.30; HE MAN, $3.80.

ROYAL ROBES, much the best, assumed command at her leisure and opened up a long lead the first half mile, and taken in the remainder of the trip, won with speed in reserve. SHAUN G., always in nearest pursuit of the leader, maintained his position with determination. HE MAN passed tired horses in the last quarter mile. RED BERRY tired.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FRANCES KEENE, $94.60, $27.10, $11.80; WAUGH POP, $5.80, $4.00; WEEKLY STIPEND, $3.50.

FRANCES KEENE, off in first flight and kept on inside, came with good energy when placed to hard drive and was up in concluding stride on inside of WAUGH POP. The latter, well placed from start, went to front boldly when asked and was kept to extreme pressure to end. WEEKLY STIPEND worked way to contention steadily and moved up under strong handling, but hung in final 70 yards. COMENDADOR II raced in close quarters in early stages, moved to serious contention along backstretch and tired suddenly.

Selections at Hialeah Park.

Dear Al:

Jockey W. L. Taylor returned from Houston, Tex., where he has been vacationing since his fall at Tropical Park which ended his saddle battle with Earl Dew. Taylor says he is ready to go to work. Jimmy Corcoran sends his regards to the boys at the golf clubs and appears to be doing O. K. Jimmy Young flew his plane in yesterday from Washington and hopped right out to give the bangtails a tussle. Beverley Broun, Mr. Big of the West Virginia Racing Commission, is a visitor and will take part in the annual convention of racing commissioners here. Trainer Harry Baker arrived from Maryland for a vacation. Baker hopes to acquire a private stable for the opening of the Maryland season at Bowie. He conditioned Calumet Dick when that horse was a star in handicap circles. Maj. G. L. Styker conferred with John P. Turner, racing secretary at Laurel, yesterday. Jockey Reds Howell, who rode three winners in the first five days here, has given first call to the Circle M Ranch. Eddie McCann is going over to Cuba to work for the Racing Form. If you think those flamingos hang around the grandstand end of that infield lake you're wrong. They are strictly clubhouse and keep right in front of the big money gals and boys. This track has two outriders. One is "Redcoat" Murray, who invented the job. Tommy Daly is here. He's the announcer at the Maryland tracks, and it wouldn't be a bad idea to put him in action here. They have a speaker system, but only use it to tell the folks that the horses are on the track. One thing, this track has a real, honest-to-goodness orchestra which keeps the winners in good spirits. The Calumet Stable people are mighty pleased with the signing of Jockey W. Eads. The Illinois boy rode at his new job for the first time yesterday and turned in a brilliant ride to win with Proud One in the fifth race. BILL.

First race—Sam Houston turned in a nice third in a fast race over this course. May have needed that for education purposes and I'm going to string along. Snowtop comes to the races highly recommended and promises to do a lot of running. Rattling Heels for the minor award.

Second race—Walloper was fourth to Mill Tower and is dropped into maiden company for this test. Packs enough punch to win and I'm going to be there. Flying Plaid is tossed in this with 100 pounds and promises to be a keen factor. Equioval for the third money.

Third race—White Hot, winner of his last, seems headed for another set of brackets in this field. Goes postward burdened with 122 pounds but I believe he can handle the assignment. Prince Derek gets 15 pounds from the top one and is dangerous. Canape will be close at payoff time.

Fourth race—Magic Stream drops 17 pounds off that last and will be ready for the best in this company. Breaks in the clear on the outside and is fit as hands makes horses. Votum won last out and will be in the thick of contention. Cherry Trifle to take care of the others.

Fifth race—Great Albert forced the pace in the Inaugural Handicap here and gets in this with light weight. May take the front and stay there. Clyde Tolson has turned in four good efforts and is the one to beat. Exarch promises to make a money appearance.

Sixth race—Time O'War, a recent winner, moves up but is so fit that I'm forced to take him. Gets in with 109 pounds and will have good handling. Potranco worked six furlongs in 1:13 but seems overweight. Cherry Jam raced in the Inaugural.

Seventh race—Memory Book, third to Mythical King, appears ready to carry 115 pounds to victory over this route. He has worked good and looks like the best thing of the day. Busy Man has a brilliant record. Likes conditions and should be second. Maydig was a winner in Maryland and may be close.

Eighth race—English Harry seems suited by the mile and a half route. May take a purse here. Sicklebill was fourth in good company and will be close. Old River to fill out the money circle.

Substitute race—If this event is used, I'll take Equistone, Kings Blue and Donna Leona.

Best bet—Memory Book.

Stocks Ease as Traders Cash Profits; Bonds and Commodities Also Weaken

By Frederick Gardner

Associated Press Financial Writer.

New York, Jan. 14.—A light sprinkle of profit-taking sales depressed stock prices fractions to more than a point today in a downswing from the preceding New Year advance.

Sellers got the upper hand in most of the active markets. The strong rise in corporate bonds was checked. Major commodities, slowly on the upgrade for some weeks, likewise trimmed sails. Losses generally were small, however.

Many traders cashed their paper profits and retired to the sidelines to await events in the aid-Britain battle at home and the fighting in Europe. Business reports continued to stress the theme of speed in defense production but prospects of more expansion in war industry still seemed to be offset largely in market calculations by expectations of tax increases and the question how far the United States would go in helping England.

A number of long-time investment favorites, following a rally from the December lows, again seemed to suffer from selling on the assumption they would feel prospective tax boosts more than the rank and file of the list. Eastman fell 2 to 139. Monsanto Chemical ended down 1⅝ at 85½ and American Can lost 1⅛ at 92½.

Stocks mentioned in reports of plans for additional selling of American securities out of British holdings did better than most. Union Pacific closed down only ¼ at 84. A block of 42,000 shares of Union Pacific from the English assets was offered "over-the-counter" after the close of the exchange.

Brokerage circles heard blocks of General Electric and Woolworth were due to come on the market shortly. Both of these issues showed little change.

Ending fractions to more than a point lower were Eastern Airlines, U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Westinghouse, Santa Fe, Great Northern preferred, United Aircraft, General Motors and Kennecott. U. S. Rubber preferred dropped 3 to 90¼.

The Associated Press composite price of 60 stocks dipped .2 of a point to 44.7. Transactions amounted to 468,910 shares against 474,770 in the preceding session.

Cotton Futures

New York, Jan. 14 (AP).—Cotton futures in the third consecutive decline today receded further from the season's highs touched last week. Final prices were off 7 to 9 points.

The recession was accelerated by disappointment over lower than expected December consumption and Secretary Morgenthau's statement that some commodities were too high.

Brokers also said recent gains had led to larger repossession of cotton from Government loan stocks and free Southern offerings of spot cotton. This in turn caused increased hedging and less buying.

The Census Bureau reported December use of 773,472 bales, up 30,000 bales from November and a new record for the month. The trade had been expecting a figure closer to 800,000 bales.

Worth street textile dealers reported only a modest follow through to the brisk business of late Monday. Prices held firm.

Exports Monday, nil. Season so far, 618,759 bales. Port receipts, 7.13. Port stocks, 3,447,456.

He was a member of the Military Order of the World War, the Cosmos Club, the District Medical Society, the American Medical Association, and a fellow of the American College of Surgeons.

Surviving is his wife, Mrs. Adalyn Hawthorne Parker, of Washington.

Listen! with Glynn

When Bill Dunn, of the Columbia Broadcasting System's public affairs and news department, was in Washington a couple of days ago, he was pretty pleased with the passport he'd just got from the State Department.

As he happily showed it around to his friends at WJSV, it said—"This passport expires January 8, 1943. It is not valid for travel in any country outside the Western Hemisphere, except"—and here's where the exceptions seemed to be the rule—"except," it continued, "in Japan, China, Hongkong, Siam, French Indo-China, the Netherlands East Indies, the Philippine Islands, British Borneo, the Straits Settlement, India, Australia and New Zealand." Which, Bill maintained, was being pretty darned exceptional.

Occasion for that imposing list of Eastern Hemisphere countries on Bill's passport was his appointment as director of CBS's correspondents in the Far East. He leaves today for the West Coast, from there to sail for Manila, and from Manila to go on a roving assignment for the next six months visiting key points in each of those countries.

He'll see Columbia's correspondents in Tokio and Batavia and will appoint correspondents and set up news bureaus wherever he sees the need on his tour. It's part of CBS's plan to perfect its news coverage throughout the world.

Contract Bridge

Morrie Elis, who at this time holds two of the most important championships in tournament bridge, the world's individual and the world's masters' pairs (the latter with Harry J. Fishbein,) says flatly, "my opponents can only play hands at a suit contract of one, doubled".

The principle is a sound one, but like other principles it requires proper application. A few days ago, at the Mayfair Bridge Club a pair was going through the game, and at one table one of the players took a 500-point penalty to prevent a part-score of 110 points. The match-point score was, of course, equally disappointing.

At the next table the pair met as opponents Elis and his partner, William E. McKenney. The burned child dreads the fire, and perhaps that explains the result of the hand, the cards and bidding of which are as shown in today's box. North having taken a penalty of 500 points just a hand before, believed that he should profit by the lesson and let Elis play the contract. He was wrong, as his cards warranted at least one bid, and the score proved the point.

Elis made one spade for a plus score of 80 points; whereas, had North-South taken the bid, they would have won the trick at hearts for a score of 140 points. While seemingly inconsequential at duplicate "top" or "bottom."

The outstanding fesuture of the bidding is the response of one spade by Elis to his partner's double with only three cards in the suit. Only strong players would risk this bid; others would stick to the conventional response of the best minor suit.

Christianity Will Survive, Episcopal Missioner Says

Civilization may be destroyed, but a "remnant of the Christian faithful" will rebuild it, as in ages past, Dr. Bernard Iddings Bell said last night at Epiphany Episcopal Church.

Continuing his "teaching mission" begun Sunday, the Columbia University professor of religion told a large audience that "we are living in a world of selfishness and greed," and predicted that, while Christianity and civilization may fall, the "faithful" will rebuild them.

Dr. Bell will celebrate communion today at 11 a. m., and will be available for personal interviews from 12:10 to 1 p. m. and from 2 to 4 p. m. He speaks tonight at 8 p. m. on "Moral." His general theme is "God for Thinking, Troubled People."

Wheatley P.-T. A. Hears Dr. Ballou

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, told the Wheatley School Parent-Teacher Association yesterday that "intelligent citizenship should be the cornerstone of defense and national unity."

Discussing the relation of the P.-T. A. and the schools, Dr. Ballou praised mothers and teachers for training young peple to do their duty in emergencies.

"The splendid attitude of the people of America toward the draft," he said, "is due to the training given them by mothers and teachers. They have been taught to do their duty in times such as these."
